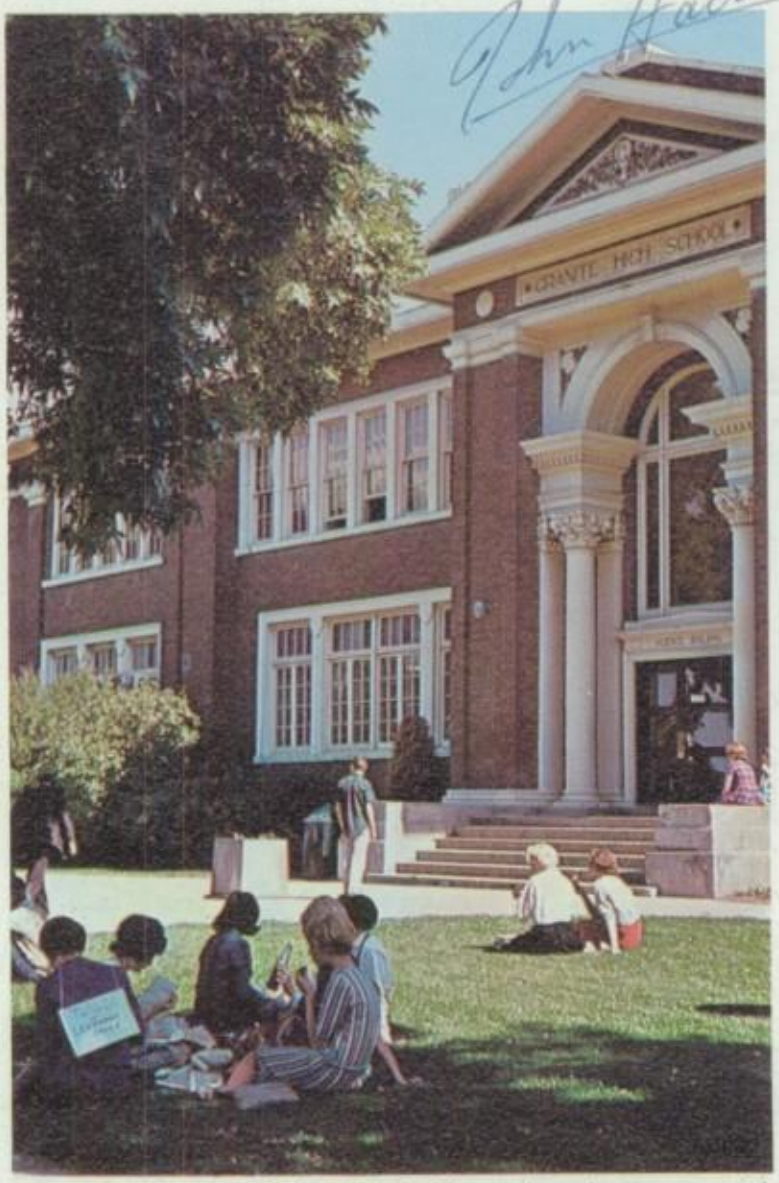
Before the Homecoming parade we salute the red and blue flags of school and nation, cheering the color guard, the boys who gain knowledge to defend our country.

KNOWLEDGE IS POWER

This was supposed to be Reserved! for me! John Wadlock



We mount the steps of the "S" Building, where for seven periods each day, we work together, play together, and plan together.

Dear Julene,
I'm really going to miss you next year in French because I don't have French next year. Maybe we'll have another class together. I don't think I would had any fun in French (if that is possible) if it hadn't been for you sitting by me for two years. I'll see you soon.

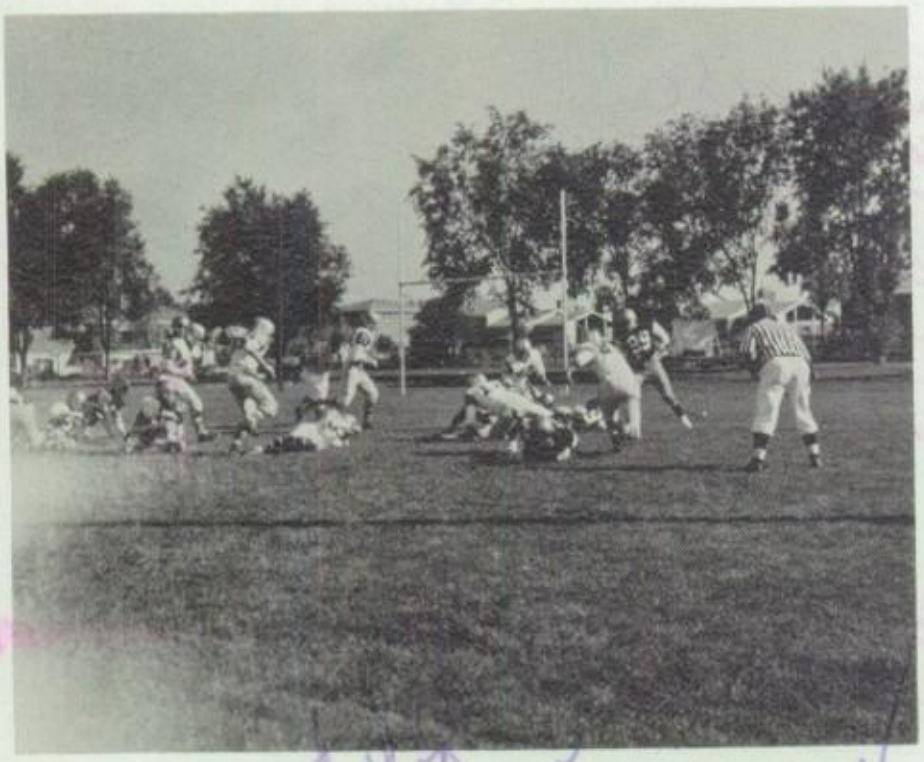
Just as Granitians did in the fall of 1926, we entered the 'S' building last year full of enthusiasm, eager to meet new friends, see old faces, and gain more knowledge. We found the seal there as usual, its polished surface of red, white, and blue tiles, its thirty-one acorns, its Lamp of Knowledge, and its Granite boulder gleaming in the main hall. For sixty-one years, we have honored and worshipped the tradition of the seal and the memories it stands for. In the shadow of this sacred symbol, we have worked, studied, and planned to round out our education. We have slaved till midnight on Homecoming floats, practiced hours on assembly parts, and worked till dawn on leads in the school play. We have danced to "Moon River" at the Junior Prom. We have concentrated on STEP and National Merit Tests. We have published a newspaper and have prepared graduation speeches.

HIGH SCHOOL

Clustered around the flagpole, we chant "Fight Granite" as our team, united through their interest in basketball, leaves for a state tournament contest.



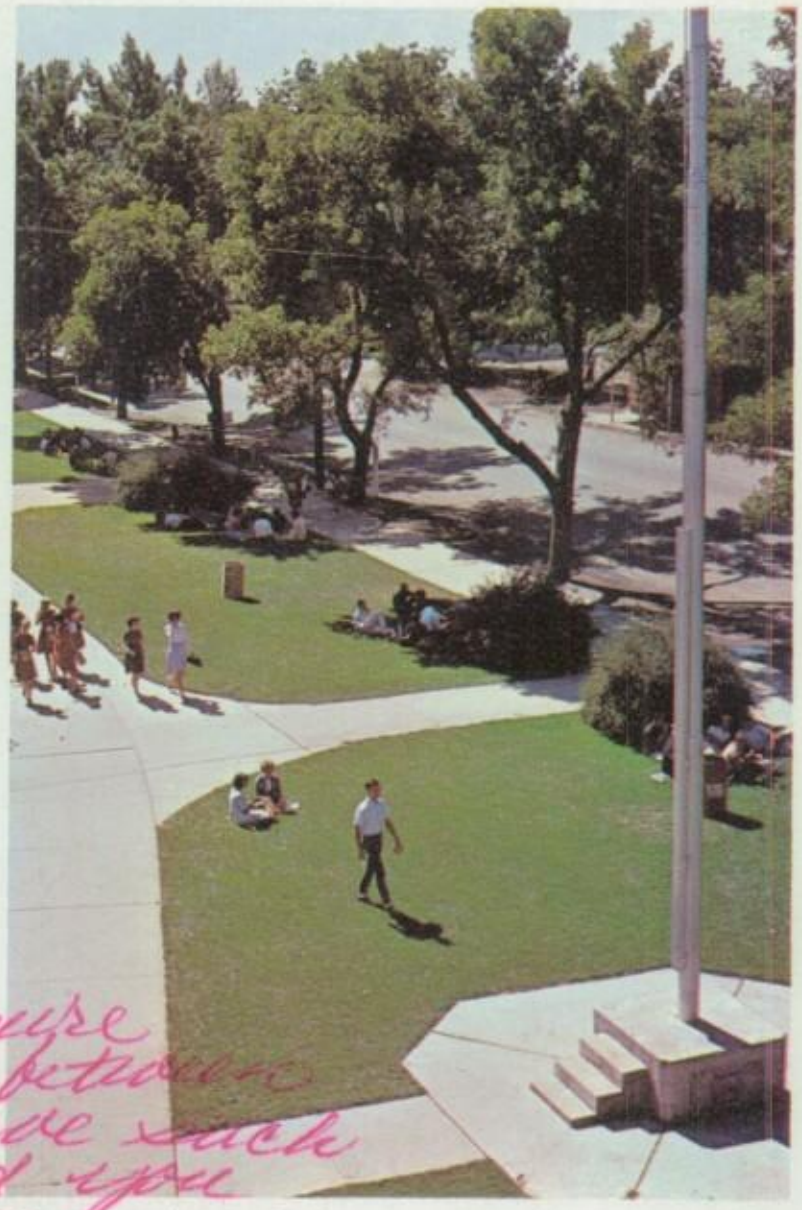
We scream for victory as our football team struggles through fast-moving plays with only common sense and a knowledge of tactics to obtain the touchdown.

unity builds strength

We have honored the traditions of the seal, with its replica of the Lamp of Knowledge and Granite boulder, surrounded by thirty-two acorns. We have laughed at and scolded naive sophomores for walking on the sacred symbol and forced them to count the tiles or scrub its surface with a miniature toothbrush. We have guarded the seal against the footsteps of strangers and traced a familiar path around it during the four-minute rush between classes. We have treasured its Latin motto, "Sapientia Est Potentia," and we have worked to gain the power of knowledge. We have typed till the wee hours to finish a research paper on Communism or analyze The Lord of the Flies for Advanced Placement. We have screamed at the top of our lungs, "Go it, Granite, go it, Granite. Go. Go. GO!" at pep rallies and football games. We have smudged each other's noses with green chalk or black poster paint when we have decorated for dances or constructed backgrounds for the Dance Assembly or the school play, The Night of January 16th. We have applauded with blistered hands from clean-up day the winners on the Awards Assembly . . . we have cried when Ryan, Ted, and Karen addressed the student body for the last time on the Farewell Assembly and cheerleaders led the "Song of the G."

here I am

We watch the Pep Club smile and guide together in a precisioned group which has expanded from 9 boys in 1926 to 64 girls in 1964.



After thirty days at half mast in remembrance of a learned president, the flag returns to its lofty perch above the campus.

Dear Julene, I hope you treasure the friendship that has grown between us this year as I do. You have such a wonderful personality and you were always willing to listen to all my jabber about Scott too! And you gave me enough answers to save my life this year! You're a darling and real smart girl! I'll see you this summer for sure and I hope you'll be in all my classes next year - how else will I pass? Love Ellen Garcia

time enhances tradition

In 1918 when Mrs. Laurena Eldredge Warnick designed the seal with an acorn for each senior, Granite graduated thirty-two Farmers. Today we have grown to a class of almost five hundred. Our growth has been reflected in those blue and white acorns surrounding the seal, our growth from a basic curriculum of history, English, mathematics, and horticulture, to a seven period day filled with advanced placement classes, bacteriology, and foreign languages. Years ago, we attended school in a three room red brick building on the northeast corner of Thirty-third South and Fifth East. Today our school includes five buildings on the southeast corner, besides a baseball diamond, a football field, two large asphalt parking lots, and a faculty of more than one hundred teachers and advisers.

Dressed in red and blue uniforms that sparkle against the crystal white snow, we cheer with the Pep Band, laugh at the antics of Mr. Weight as he directs "Mickey Mouse," clap to the rhythm of "Go, Fight, Win," and harmonize through the "Song of the G."

Julene,
I am glad to have known you through the years. You sure are an intelligent person. Have fun this summer and I'll be seeing you next year. (Wasn't Carlson a blast HA HA HA!)
Martha Jensen

Hi Julene,

Well, we've survived Carbon. You not only survive you get straight A's. I have enjoyed knowing you and associating with you this year. Be good and keep smiling.

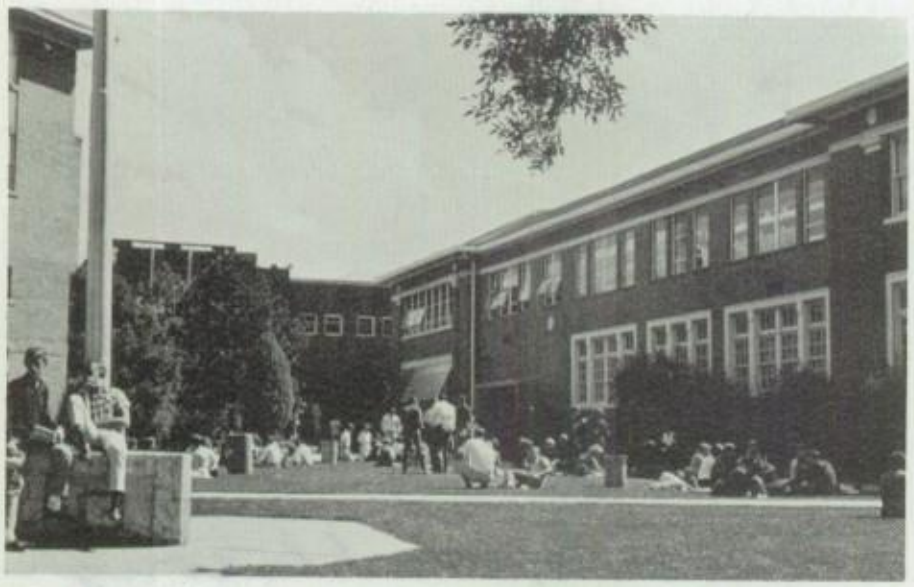
With the skill developed through hours of tedious practice — of searching for a velvet tone quality — Granitians play "Waltz of the Flowers" by Peter Tchaikowsky, echoing the strength and knowledge that will help them to enjoy the new age of leisure.

knowledge lights the way



Within these walls, we gained knowledge by experimenting in Chemistry, chatting with friends between classes, and consulting counselors for college entrance.

We know that the central figure in the seal, the Lamp of Knowledge, echoes the desires of Granitians. For three years — fewer for some of us — the search for knowledge has motivated our efforts. We have realized that with the promise of "knowledge is power," any one of us, despite background or finances, may aspire to heights we set our hearts and minds on. The sky is the limit for us who have the courage to try. With the vision of unlimited power, we seek to gain a better paying job, organize a new project, or move into a higher social circle. We hope to create a new poem, a new painting, a new world, overcome disease, pain, and poverty . . . Knowledge is our power.

In Pep Club we have drowsily fallen in for roll call before perfecting a precision march for basketball. We have slaved over resolutions, ironing out flaws before representing the United States in the Model United Nations. We have attended FTA parties, guessing which teacher's name is pinned on our backs. We have scrambled into grubbies before racing to a track meet. On the football squad, we have worked out until dusk to practice the timing for our special "Statue of Liberty" play.

ACTIVITIES

Whether we are alumni from the class of '25 or sophomores in '64 — our interests are united in this seal. From its roundness, we have gained the roundness of personality — we have worked, planned, and played together.

boys' league

holds twist contest at Mothers and Sons'

During the annual Mothers and Sons' night, the melodious voices of Tom Frame and his talented mother blend together singing "Put on Your Old Gray Bonnet."

The Boys' League promoted a fun-filled year with parties, contests, dances, assemblies, and 'G' Week activities. At the annual Boys' League party, mothers and sons danced to the music of the Granite High School Dance Band, chatted about school activities, and yelled "Bingo!" The twist contest highlighted the evening with Dave Schultz and his mother taking top honors. In other dance contests, Larry Smith, Ron Nelson, and Terry Rydman won prizes for their smooth glides around the floor. Featuring Gene Fullmer as special guest, the boys planned a banquet for their fathers. Ping pong attracted the interest of many as tough competition mounted and Gail Wright defeated his opponents to win the championship. Boys' League representatives added to Homecoming activities by entering the float, Cage the Eagles, in the parade and by decorating the gym for the dance with photographs of well-known alumni. The officers initiated a new activity at Granite — a clothing drive for the Children's Federation.

Officers — Tom Frame, Earl Ohlson, Terry Pendley, Joe Gardner, Raleigh Davis, Steve Sorenson and Bill Chrristopulos explore Gene Fullmers' scrapbook while making plans for the Fathers and Sons' banquet at which the former middleweight champion was principal speaker.

Dear Julene,
I wish I was as good at Chemistry as you but I guess we all can't be brains.
Good luck Always girls' league sponsors locker-decorating contest

In a melodrama on the Girls' League Assembly in February, Greg Karch encourages his sweetheart, Joy Christensen, to "flee" from her ruthless father.

In weekly meetings 73 members of the Girls' League worried about "Who will entertain at Fathers and Daughters?" "What will be the theme of our dance?" and "How can we spur interest in the locker decorating contest?" In November for the Girls' League dance, French Flair, members dabbed paint on canvasses for the refreshment room, draped blue, pink, purple, and green crepe paper across the gym ceiling, and placed the white pillared gazebo in the center of the floor. At Christmas Girls' League members cried "Decorate your locker" as they initiated a new contest and adorned their lockers with pine boughs, tree ornaments, and silk ribbon. In February they organized their annual assembly, Getting to Know You, highlighted by a snappy charleston, a pantomime to "I Want to Be Loved by You," and a proposal of marriage by Kent Davis to Bruce Jones. For Farmers and Charmers, members competed in waltz contests, nibbled vanilla ice cream, and laughed at jokes of emcee Catherine Gustavson and her father.

german club

shares Christmas gifts with needy children

On the German Club assembly, Ted Alsop, entertainer in a German band, and Linda Gardner, a pretty fraulein, take a breather with pretzels and punch.

At a Language Festival sponsored in March by the combined foreign language departments, German Club members grappled with tests to prove their proficiency in the Teutonic language. Earlier in the year the club's members sold over one hundred and fifty dollars worth of candy to parents, relatives, and friends. The money was used to finance a sub for Santa project. They shopped, wrapped packages, and knitted slippers for twelve unfortunate children. Meeting on Christmas Eve outside the home on Seventh East, they delivered the presents to wide-eyed youngsters who met Santa Claus and shook his hand. With wishes of "Merry Christmas," Santa's helpers departed singing "Stille nacht, heilege nacht . . ." In February they presented a German assembly using a cafe setting. Participants sang lively folk tunes and performed authentic folk dances accompanied by a six piece German band. To complete the year's activities, awards were presented to the Language Festival winners at an April dinner.

On the German assembly, Kathy Stanley and Greg Karch harmonize to the Deutsch song "Heidelburg".

"Picture this," suggests Donna Catmull to other German Club officers — Richard Ludwig, Marilyn Pugh, Dave Shore, and April Tsuya — while planning assembly.

"Off she rode across the mountain . . . " sings Dan Lewis with his foot on his gut-bucket at the annual Mothers and Sons' night sponsored by the Boys' League on January 23. The rest of the Meridan Four — Keith Kendall, Ken Bradshaw, and Gary Guest — harmonizes to the mournful strains of "Julianne".

folklore unlimited

surfs to guitar music at first club party

"It's not the Beatles' hair that bothers me; it's the money they're taking home," remarks Beverly Olson to Lois Woolsey, Steve Kimball, and Pam Smith.

With folk music gaining in popularity across the nation, Granite folk singing enthusiasts originated Folklore Unlimited to acquaint the students with the history and types of modern and ancient folk music. This organization was created at a special meeting held at the home of Ginger Vaughn. At their first party, eighty members enjoyed a night of singing and surfing. With the Highway Surfers providing the rhythmic beat, Granite folklorists danced, ate glazed doughnuts, and sipped apple cider. A hand-clapping guitar-strumming hootenany closed the fun-filled evening. "This Land Is Your Land" echoed throughout the room as the students responded in resounding unison. Next on the club agenda, the Hillbilly Hoot took place. Arriving in gay costumes of many variations, sixty members depicted country folk. Those responsible for the year's activities were Ken Bradshaw, president; Steve Kimball, vice-president; Ginger Vaughn, correspondent; Phyllis DeMott, secretary; and Nancy Brock and Gary Guest, co-treasurers.

gaa competes in class basketball tournament

"Only eighteen more miles to go," puffs Robina Halling as she pedals the stationary exercise bicycle during an after-school physical fitness session.

To begin a season of rigorous sports, GAA participants competed in baseball, basketball, volleyball, tennis and ping pong matches. Odette Waddoups' senior baseball squad batted its way to the championship in the four week tourney. Later in the season, Claudia Cutler's sophomore team took top volleyball honors. Ping pong enthusiasts — Jeanne Sester and Karen Goodrich — challenged colleagues to gain a thirty-point lead. Swathed in heavy turkish towels to protect delicate hairdos, the members formed unique silouettes in the 'L' Building pool every Thursday afternoon. Decorated in pastel green, pink, blue, and lavender toilet tissue, the girls devoured shishkabobs, pineapple sundaes, and ranch rolls at their Hawaiian Luau. Sponsored by Mrs. Marjorie Hyatt and Mrs. Alice Nellestein, the Girls' Athletic Association held a final banquet in honor of outstanding seniors, champion teams, and individual all-stars. Awards included gold medallions to Barbara Mineer and Jeanne Sester, tennis champs.

"But what can we do without Barbara Mineer?" asks Karen Foltz of ther GAA officers — Katie Simpson, Lois Mascherino, and Heidi Tillmann — as they discuss plans for shuffleboard, ping pong, tennis, and wisket tournament in the absence of the vice president.

"Strike one!" calls referee Jeannene Le Vitre as Sherry Weston and Katie Simpson prepare for the softball tournament. The Girls' Athletic Association encouraged sportsmanship as well as physical fitness by sponsoring individual student competition.

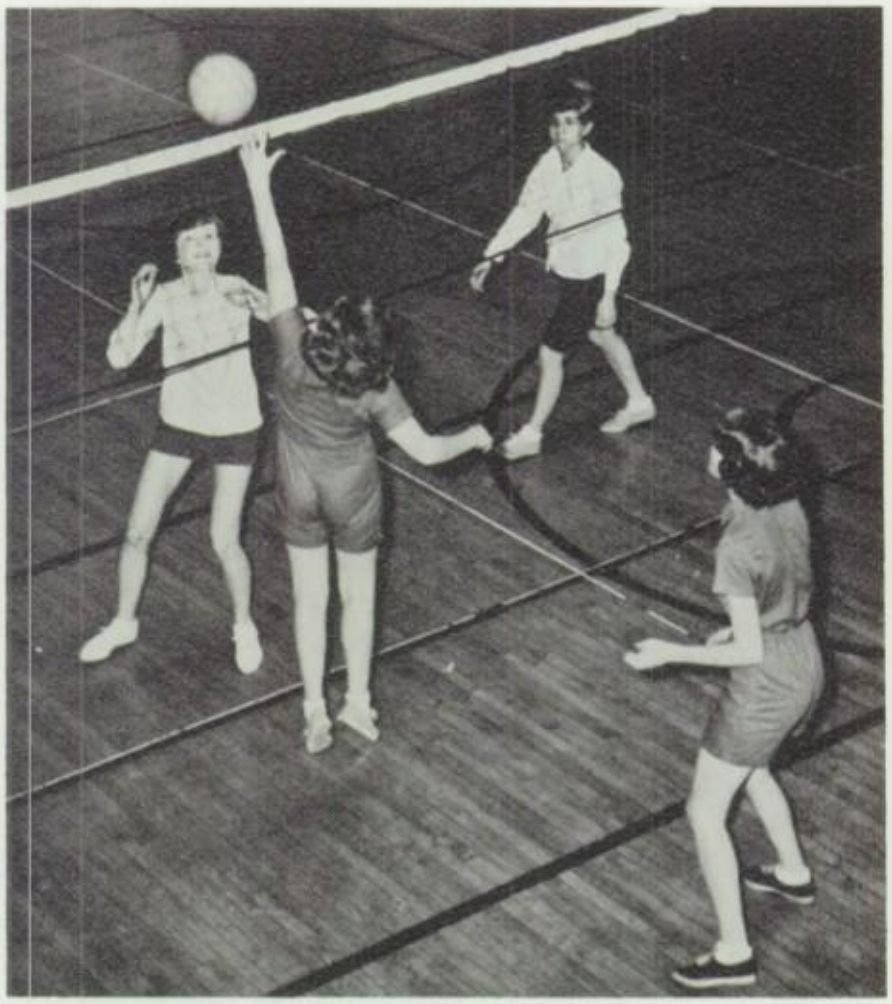
During a crucial game in the GAA basketball tournament playoffs, Linda Roundy and Jeannene Le Vitre jump to tip the ball to a waiting teammate, Julia Cooper.



Spurred into action by Laura Pace's spike, Glenda Smith and Rosemary Wabel shift into defensive positions as Claudia Cutler watches, hoping for a win.

One of their most important speakers was Dr. Jacob Geerlings, who said that today's life depended on ancient civilization.

hears lectures on South America and Europe

"This says countries in the Common Market share tariff cuts," remarks Darlene Peterson to other officers — Leslie Muder, Kay Whitney, and Keith Despain.

To deepen their appreciation of European cultures, the Language Arts Club viewed slides of Norway, England, Germany, France, and Spain, listened to guest speaker Principal Thorum, and dreamed of future European tours. At a groovy beatnik party in October, club members nibbled on thick wedges of pizza, recited original poetry, danced to jazz records, and romped relay races and a limbo contest in the newspaper strewn social room. In December the club caroled around a sparkling, tinsel-draped Christmas tree, and exchanged twenty-five-cent gifts. After enjoying a dinner of tuna fish and chicken casseroles, jello salads, hot rolls, and cherry punch, the members competed for door prizes and relay-race victories to win candy bars, flutes, horns, and stuffed animals. Enthralled by unusual slides of South America, Language Arts Club members questioned Mr. Wood Whitlock about his trip to the twenty-six Latin American countries and examined souvenir dolls, native coins, costumes, drivers' licenses.

gains Superior ratings at Weber College

"The aged are incapable of paying for medical expenses," argues Linda Smith in a debate pitting Randy Young and her against Kathy Warnick and Sandy Case.

After extensive research through Time, Newsweek, U. S. News and World Report, and Current History on "Medical Care Through Social Security"; last minute card party exchanges, final revision of ideas, affirmative plans, and strategy, Granite debators attended their first Inter-Mountain meet at Carbon College, February 1. The experience gained in close battles with Arizona, Nevada, and Idaho opponents helped Linda Smith, Randy Young, Sandy Case, and Kathy Warnick win Superior ratings at the Weber College Invitational Forensic Meet later in the month. Displaying their versatility, Kim Foltz, Jim Woodard, and Mary Linda Olsen earned Excellent ratings in the Oratory Division. In addition, Granitians examined the tax cut for Teen-Age Debate during a fall program, debated in the Regional Meet at Skyline High School, March 6, and participated in legislative forum, oratory, and extemporaneous speaking competition in the Regional Contest held at Olympus High, March 12.

un club represents United States in Model Assembly

"One, two, three . . . " mutters Nadine Cope as she counts votes to determine club's historians during a November meeting of the United Nations Club.

For the first time since it was organized ten years ago, the UN Club represented one of the five major powers, the United States, at the Model Assembly. Other firsts were the election of four historians — Sue Ashurst, Sharon Carlton, Mary Beth Crawford, and Gloria Sargent — to complete a scrapbook, and the initiation of Miss Margaret Maag as a co-sponsor. Directed by Miss Phyllis McArdle, the delegates prepared resolutions on Cyprus, Vietnam, and atomic energy; studied government reports and the New York Times for facts on US policies; and polished parliamentary procedure for the spring meet. Guest speakers like Carolyn Smith, who discussed her pilgrimage to the UN, and ex-Granitian teacher Mr. Dan Jones, highlighted Wednesday meetings. Club officers Joluut Vanderhooft, secretary-general; Sandy Case, under secretary; and Nadine Cope, secretary-treasurer; planned the welcoming of new members, parties commemorating special events, and research trips to the University of Utah.

To instill in students a sincere desire to teach by studying the demands, problems, and rewards of the profession, the Future Teachers of America Club was organized at Granite this year. With Mr. Moffit as sponsor, the twenty members chose officers after hearing a brief summary of goals for the club by Dorothy Zimmerman, State FTA sponsor.

Twenty-four Beaux Arts Club members, in an effort to further their interest in early painters and modern artists, visited exhibits at the Hudnut Gallery and the Art Center throughout the year. Under the sponsorship of Mrs. Virginia Smith, enthusiasts frolicked at the annual Christmas party, labored to improve their artistic skill, and entered art contests.

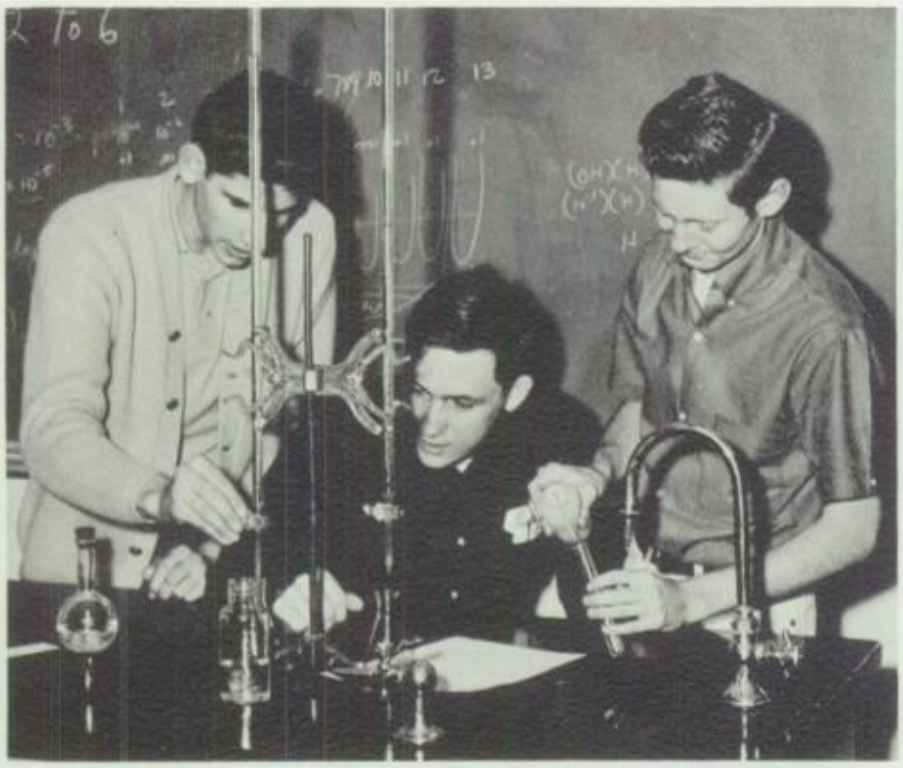
chemistry club prepares a meal through chemical reactions



"Add a little more acid," suggests Jolnut Vanderhooft to Mike Henry and Ken Thuet who check figures on normality test during a chemical titration study.

Citric acid spiked with tomatoes headed the list on the Chem menu at the Chemistry Club dinner held in March. With careful planning the fourteen-member club prepared a meal made only by chemical reactions. CO_2 fizzed in the rootbeer, tartaric acid spiced the catsup, and $NaHCO_2$ reacted in the biscuits. "Cyanide awaits unwelcome visitors, "teased Mrs. Mariger, who, with Mr. Hutchinson, instructed the club members every week after school on chemical formulas and reactions. Preparing for the Science Fair, the chemists developed projects on crystalization, refrigeration, and solar energy and met with the Science Club once a month. The two groups listened to lectures on subjects such as ceramics, biochemistry, and medical technology. In February Dr. Kano, a Japanese who lived a half mile from the atomic blast in Hiroshima, spoke to the scientists of his experience. "It was my white clothing which reflected the radiation, that saved me," stated the man who survived the bombing.

gays initiate card section for Homecoming half-time

Officers — Leslie Muder, Marilyn Dautrich, Sharon Carlson, Ruby Bolander, and Odette Waddoups sing over the telephone to Granitians, "You Are My Valentine."

At dawn each Thursday morning, forty-nine girls belonging to the GAYS, Granitians at Your Service, trooped to room S-120 to organize their projects. In December they participated in Sub for Santa, providing a family of six with dolls, candy, games, coats, and story books. Flocking to the study hall, club members frolicked at a Christmas party, caroling on nearby street corners, gulping white cake and raspberry punch, and unwrapping perfume, wallets, and goldfish from their "genies". "Decorate a cake" became the cry in December, as the members baked orange, white, and coconut cakes for the cake decorating contest. Clad in red and blue uniforms, they initiated the card section at Homecoming, forming the Granite G and the Skyline S. Sponsored by Angela Riedel, the club members ushered at "Back to School" night, at the faculty pre-school luncheon, and at Fathers and Sons'. Climaxing the year, the members donned their silks, satins, brocades and velvets for the annual May banquet.

With club funds, Jazz Affiliated officers Joe, Kim, and Hanna purchased albums to augment the club's study of jazz. To acquaint students with jazz and stimulate enthusiasm among the members, club leaders, along with sponsors Mr. Neal and Miss Stamoulis, planned a pizza party, danced, and listened to jazz at the first social on February 23.

Twenty-six Chess Club members gathered in room S 114 to skirmish with opponents, challenged players from East, South, Skyline and Highland, and strived for improvement of their skill throughout the 1964 year. Under the able supervision of Miss Howe, enthusiasts researched for "sure-fire" plays and discovered a new method of setting up the board.

When a special guest speaker such as Dr. Ivan Cutler, head of the ceramic engineering department at the University of Utah was featured, Chemistry Club members joined the science enthusiasts' meeting. In his lecture on semi conductors, Dr. Cutler baffled students with the question, "What makes glass break?" Other meetings featured past president, Jeff Siirola, demonstrating and discussing his solar refrigerator, and Shoko Aogaichi and Sondra Kenyon, displaying their red, blue, speckled gray geometric crystals.

dances to Nutcracker Suite at Christmas

"I say there, old chap, have you seen my contacts?" crooks Greg Karch to Andy Roberts during an expedition to darkest Africa on the Dance Club Assembly.

In preparing for the Christmas assembly, twenty Dance Club members warmed up with leg stretches and plies, then, to the rhythmic "Waltz of the Flowers," glided through shanee turns and waltz steps with grace and precision. To deviate from ballet, the young choreographers designed scenery, wrote script, and arranged dances for the Dance assembly, Route 66. In a frenzy to make roll call every day, the dancers slammed lockers and dashed to the dance studio, tights sagging and leotards slipping. Scampering into line, the girls frantically pulled on ballet slippers and waited for the instructions of Mrs. Gonzales, the student teacher. Moans and groans echoed as the girls spread legs in straddle position, touched chins to the floor, and rotated arms to each toe. Besides exercising and dancing, the young coeds, under the direction of Mrs. Alta Christensen, sewed blue dresses for Dance Club uniforms and fashioned green chiffon and pink satin costumes in preparation for a program at the Veterans' hospital.

Ski Club Officers — Darryl Conrad, Eugenia Bapis, Claire Harrison, and Doug Wahlquist — discuss plans for a future club party over a coke at Tony's.

To learn about the skills and experts in the field of skiing, one hundred seventeen Granitian ski enthusiasts reorganized the Ski Club. On a freezing January night, the club members crowded the chorus room for their first party. Clad in orange, turquoise, yellow, and purple ski pants and bright print parkas, members viewed "The Road to Innsbruck," a film about the winter Olympics. Then they scurried down the "S" Building stairs to the cafeteria, where they munched white cake with blue frosting and drank cherry punch. After listening to the Highway Surfers play "Pipeline," "Outer Limits," and "Wipeout," the club members surfed to the Beach Boys singing "Hawaii," "Surfin' USA," and "Honolulu Lulu." On Saturdays and Sundays club members gained skill in "shussbooming," covering "sitzmarks," and cultivating skiing techniques on the slopes of Brighton, Alta, and Park City. During the week, officers and sponsor selected films, planned parties, and decorated a booth for the G Week carnival.

greets the sun at six-thirty practices

"There's just this onest thing!" yells the bouncy, red-headed drill mistress, Jenna Mather, before the Granite-West football march. "Pick up your feet!"

Started by a shrill whistle, sixty-four Pep Club girls, dressed in scarlet red uniforms, marched onto the gym floor at half-time to the roll of drums. After completing a routine, the group formed the numbers '64, welcoming in the new year to the tune of "Auld Lang Syne" at the first league basketball game. Greeting the sun during morning practices, the highsteppers pranced down the frost-covered football field with plastic bags wrapped around their feet, curlers in their hair, and red and blue pompoms swinging in the crisp autumn air. On one dark night, the coeds crept about basketball players' homes taping twenty-foot banners reading, "Here sleeps a fighting Farmer" across the houses. Thoughts of "What comes after the cadence," "What if they don't like our march?" and "Where are my pompoms?" haunted girls throughout the marching season. Ending the year with the Pep Club banquet, the girls clasped hands in their traditional friendship circle and sang "Marching Along Together."

The Granite gridiron machine placed fourth in Region Three prep competition with a two-win, four-loss record despite efforts of All-Stater Dave Swanson. To open the season, the fighting Farmers invaded East's field, where they met with bitter defeat. Against the poised Leopards' defense, the Granite squad failed to move the ball effectively. Plagued by hail, neither team scored in the second half, and the game ended with a 14-0 loss for the fighting Farmers. Hosting Skyline at Homecoming, the Red and Blue met fierce opposition. The Eagles plowed ahead for an early 6-0 lead, holding Granite scoreless until Leonard Neilon executed an 82-yard run to boost the Farmers' score. Even with this effort, the Farmers fell beneath the Eagles' claws. On South's battlefield, the determined gridders again encountered strong defensive play. Rolling relentlessly, the Cubs hammered to score repeatedly. Missing their only chance at a touchdown early in the fourth quarter, the Farmers tasted an 18-0 defeat.

Still looking for her first region win, Granite entertained the West Panthers, scoring each quarter. Two drives by Leonard Neilson resulted in points when Dave Swanson plunged over the Panther line early in the third quarter. Pitching a 30-yard pass, Earl Ohlson hit Kent Davis to clinch the touchdown. Nearly upsetting Highland's undefeated standing, the Farmers plowed into the Rams' opposition. The red-hot defense fought to the wire, but the Rams struggled through the lines to score. Trailing at 39-13, the Farmers combined efforts of quarterback Earl Ohlson and halfback Leonard Neilson to score twice in the last 46 seconds. For final points, Scott Harrison intercepted a Ram pass and ran 40 yard for a touchdown. Exploiting the talents of Dave Swanson, Leonard Neilson, and Larry Christensen, the Granite squad toppled the Titans. Scoring early in the first quarter and again in the second and third, the stalwart Farmers battled to a 19-6 victory before the gun ended their last play of the season.

Plagued by opposing gridders, Granite's J. V. struggled through pre-season and league gridiron skirmishes without winning a game. Although their errors were costly, Coach Hilan Jones's disciplined J.V. made few mistakes. Throughout the season, they mustered long yardage with delayed passes to the ends, and powered through confused opponents by lining left or right of the quarterback. Executing their perfected plays in their final game against Olympus, the Farmers employed a patented on-side kick and drove 50 yards for the touchdown in the first period. After the Titans scored, quarterback Terry Clegg caught his end with a pass for a second goal. While Olympus capitalized on two intercepted passes in the third period, the Farmers failed to score. In the last minute of the game, Granite completed a touchdown pass, threatening the Titan' one-point lead. Regaining the ball with an on-side kick, the Farmers hammered desperately, without success, at the determined Titan's line defense.

suffers one win, six loss, one tie season

Harassed with defeat, the sophomore football squad lost six games, won one, and tied another, receiving little reward for its endless, tiring effort and practice. "They are skilled as individual players, but are unable to work effectively as a team," stated Coach Reed Smith, after the young Farmers had been defeated by six of their eight opponents. During the season, the sophomore Farmers plowed Granger under, 26-0, through the concentrated efforts of quarterback J. R. Weinheimer and the backfield, Leba, Orgill, and Bleazard. They lost a squeaker game in the last few minutes of play to Judge Memorial High because of an untimely interception, but bounced back to block the extra point attempt and to hold Judge Memorial to a narrow 13-7 victory. Against Olympus with the line offense and defense of Perkins, Tooler, Cottle, Keddington, along with Arden Ashton, who played some varsity ball, the sophomores marched to a 26-26 score, deadlocking their arch-rival for the second year.

Defeated by East, Skyline, Highland, South, and Olympus, Granite dropped to a three-way tie for fourth place at the end of league play. With an unimpressive 5-7 win-loss record, the Farmers, on South's neutral floor, defeated Highland, 81-78, and Olympus, 63-55, in region play-offs to enter the State Tournament. In the league opener, the Rams met the Farmers on Granite's home floor. Sparked by Alex Churchich with 28 points and Kent Davis with 25 points, the Farmer five set a new school scoring record as they tromped Highland, 92-76. After a slow first quarter, the Farmers canned 24 points to run up a half time score of 40-31. Then it was score after score with Granite coming out on top. Out for their first win over the Titans, the Farmers traveled to Olympus only to be cut down by a speedy Titan squad, 64-48. Committing costly fouls, the Plowboys allowed the Titans a possible 43 points on free throws alone, while the not-so-lucky Farmers were held to a mere nine points.

For the first time in six years, the Plowboys dumped the Panthers in the West gym, with a score of 76-67. Maintaining a 10 point lead throughout most of the game, the Farmer five overcame the fine shooting of Panther John White with four Farmers hitting in the double figures. Giant met giant as the Leopards invaded Granite's gym, looking for their first victory over the Farmers. During the game, East center Scott Warner and Granite center Alex Churchich, both All-State basketball players, boosted their teams with Churchich picking up 28 points before he fouled out in the fourth quarter. With Churchich gone, it was East all the way squeaking by Granite, 83-82. Granite's victory over South retained the age-old tradition of the Cubs losing every game played on Granite's floor. Gary Arnoldus hit for 30 points to keep the game on ice. With a one point, 37-38, halftime lead, the tired Farmers threw the ball away many times before winning a victory over the Cubs, 78-75.

With two impressive playoff victories against Highland and Olympus, the Farmers entered tournament play. Opening the 56th State games at Weber College, Granite met the undefeated Grizzlies of Logan. After a close first quarter, the Farmers pulled away to a 35-27 half-time lead. Supressing a Logan comeback in the fourth period, Granite fought to a 72-65 win. During the second round game, the taller Farmers out-rebounded, out-shot, and out-ran the Bear River crew. Churchich popped in 24 points, helping in the 75-58 rout. The semi-final contest against the high-flying Clearfield Falcons proved to be a tough game for the Farmers. Employing a strict man-for-man defense, Arnoldus was held to a mere six points. When Davis and Churchich fouled out, the Granite offense collapsed, giving Clearfield an 81-62 win. In the final game, held at the U. of U., the Farmers failed to find the score board. During the third period, the game became a one-sided contest for Provo, 72-55. This dropped Granite to sixth in State.

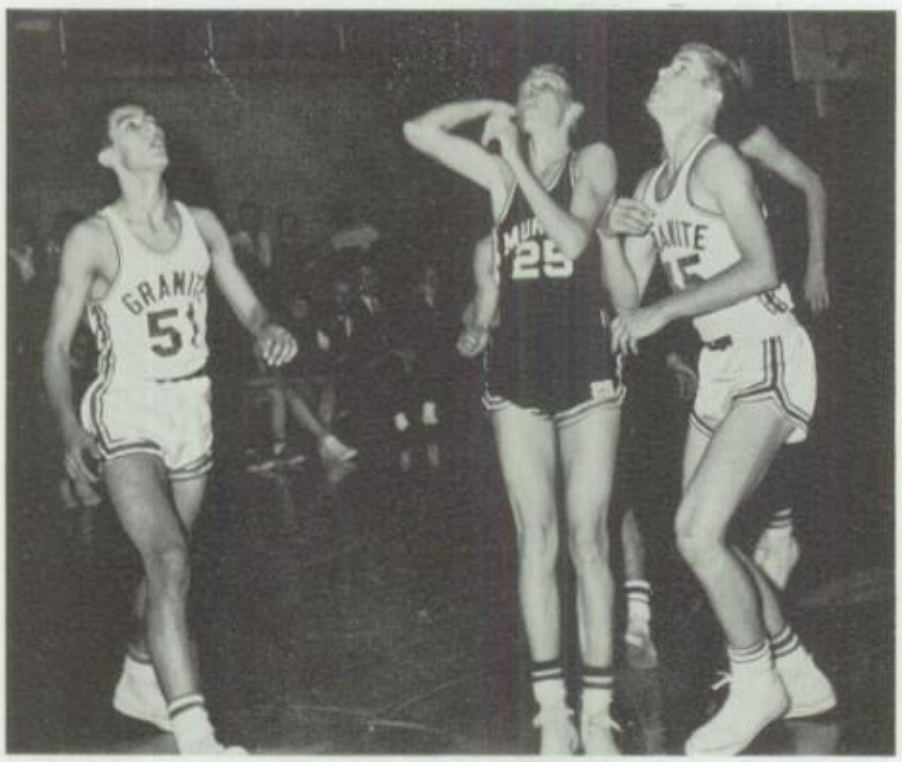
bows to defeat with a 4-8 record in league play



During a tough pre-season tussle at Granite, Junior Varsity aces, Georgiadis and Dave Beck, await the anticipated rebound under the Murray Spartan basket.

With a four win-eight loss record in league play the Junior Varsity basketball squad suffered a losing season. In pre-season competition, however, Granite was victorious in five of eight games. Farmer teammates fought untiringly and fiercely throughout the season but were unable to capitalize on their effort in most of their league duels. Bolstered by the height of sophomore Larry Georgiadis, Granitians captured three wins at Granite's gym and one at Olympus'. In its second match with East's Leopards, the JV played its most outstanding game, though East won, 67-66. In general the team played more consistently and lead more often scorewise in the first half of each game than in the second. Against both West and Olympus, Granite was ahead at half-time but lost the games with scores of 69-81 and 61-68 respectively. The JV Farmers fell twice to Highland, East, and South, and once to Skyline and West. They triumphed twice over Olympus and once over Skyline and West to finalize the 1964 season.

Junior Varsity — J. R. Weinheimer, Frank Zigrossi, Jack Yee, Dave Lundberg, Larry Georgiadis, Glen Douglas, Terry Clegg, Tom Capece — coached by John Wood, ended the season with an uncommanding five-seven win-loss record, but gave needed assistance to the varsity during the State Tournament games.

After winning two out of three games in pre-season ball, Granite's sophomores slipped to a two-win, ten-loss record to end the season. In their second league game, the Plowboys smashed the East High Leopards by a 70 to 37 score, only to fall to the Leopards at their next encounter, 43 to 51. Dropping their fourth season game to West by 54 to 60, the Farmers snapped back in the second round of play to trounce the Panthers, 71 to 38. Although dumped by the Highland Rams and the Skyline Eagles four times during the season, the Farmers nearly snatched victory from South High's Cubs, who squeaked by Granite with a one point lead at the final buzzer. In the last league game against Olympus, the Titans received the spoils over the Farmers by a four point margin. Reviewing the year, Coach Hal Erickson said he felt his boys had improved their court skills and showed good possibility for sparking future Farmer teams, even though the squad finished the season deep in the cellar on Region Three prep standings.

Under the direction of the new swimming coach Vance Mellon, former Granitian and University of Utah star, Granite's swimming team paddled to a seven-win, two-loss season record. The team, formed around the nucleus of seniors, Terry Granger in the sprints, Melvin Linford in the distance races, Irvin Nielson in the individual medley, and Ryan Searle in the breast stroke, proved to be one of the strongest in recent years. These outstanding seniors plus a number of talented juniors and a few promising sophomores provided the necessary combination to win dual meets. At the Region Two meet, Granite finished second behind East's State Champion team and qualified 22 swimmers for the State meet held at South High School. The medley relay team, composed of Reed Larsen, backstroke; Don Allred, butterfly; Dean Robinson, free style; Ryan Searle, breast stroke, captured a fifth place State finish.

finishes its league competition undefeated

Winning the State Cross Country meet with the time of 10:26.1, champion Ted Alsop crosses the finish line of the two-mile University of Utah course.

Undefeated in the season, Granite's runners, narrowly missing first place by one meet, plowed on to capture third in State competition. After defeating Weber, 28-27, in their first pre-season game, the Farmers fell to Ben Lomond, 33 to 21. In league competition, the mighty Farmers smashed all comers by an average of 14 points per meet. Squashing five of their six league opponents by margins of over 10 points, the Farmer boys slid past Highland, 26-29, in their closest season scramble. In the region meet held at the University of Utah golf course, Granite tied for the first place position with Highland High School, 26-26. At the State finals held in November, Granitians nabbed the third place slot behind Weber and Ben Lomond, who tied for the number one post. Later during the Intermountain Cross country finals, Ted Alsop streaked to the finish line in ten minutes and twenty-seven seconds for the two mile course, breaking the existing record and taking first place in the four-state meet.

Cross country team members Ted Alsop, Dave Lewis, Ray Howe, Joe Hanga, Ron Titus, and Bruce Moore discuss the course to be followed during their race against Skyline. The team tied with Highland for the Region Three championship and placed third in the State meet held on the University of Utah course.

The 1964 Granitian golf team, consisting of ten junior and senior golfers, practiced daily on the links of Nibley, Forest Dale, and Meadow Brook golf courses. Improving their driving, approach shots, and putting, experienced Phil Nelson, Ray Weller, and Bruce Lewis concentrated their efforts to shoot in the low forties against Region Three competition. Coached by Rex Olsen, the team was given a large discount at the local golf courses to help them improve their scores.

Unpredictable weather prevented the tennis team, instructed by Coach Peterson, from practicing on the outside courts. Forced to meet in the upstairs gym of the "L" building, the inexperienced, thirteen-man squad banged the ball against the handball room walls. Region matches were postponed until the last week of April, allowing the team needed time to perfect their stroking and serving techniques. The new squad was aided by the return of letterman Larry Derrick.

You are: Mrs M. Granger (Terry's Mom)

In preparation for the meet with Olympus at Granite, senior Terry Granger practices the timing on his hand-off to Brian Nielson. In mile relay which these Granitians ran, four sprinters ran 440 yards each and then passed off baton.

track struggles against continual stormy weather

In a practice run, prior to the varsity low hurdles race against South on the Farmer track, Granite hurdler, David Brown, glides easily over the hurdles.

Belated by rain, snow, and sleet, Granite's cindermen faced a season of many canceled and postponed meets. The weather finally permitting, the team traveled to West High where they won their first meet, 81 to 51, even though the meet was temporarily interrupted by a hail storm. At the next meet, Cyprus and BY High visited the Farmer field. Winning every running event, Granite rolled up 105 points at the expense of the Cyprus team, who scored 33 and the BY team, who tallied 28. Later that week, the meet with Skyline was canceled because of rain; but the track dried in time to host the powerful Cubs of South, who handed Granite its first defeat, 71½ to 51½. Undefeated throughout these encounters were miler Ted Alsop, half-miler Dan Lewis, quarter-miler Ryan Searle, sprinter Ron Nelson, pole vaulter Don Allred, discus thrower Dennis Bleazard, the medley relay team—G. Speckart, D. Williamson, D. Lewis, and T. Alsop—and the mile relay team—T. Granger, D. Lewis, D. G. Lewis, R. Searle.

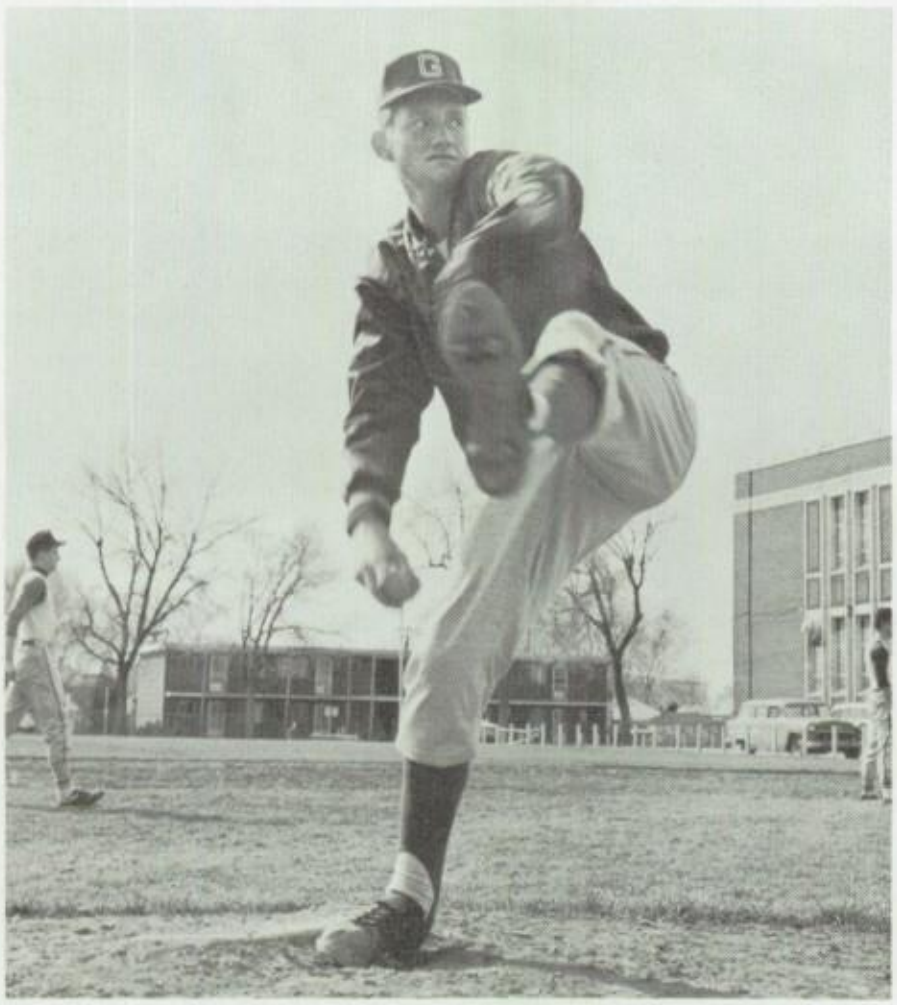
capture third place in 1963 league play

In the Granite-Skyline game at Granite, junior second baseman, Steve Nielsen takes a powerful swing at the ball, but misses for strike two. Although consistently scoring a few runs each inning, the Farmers lost 10-12, failing to catch the Eagles, who surged to a tremendous lead early in the game.



During a Granite-Olympus duel, junior pitcher Gary Arnoldus, preparing to fling the baseball to an Olympian batter, curls into his exaggerated wind-up stance.

In the 1963 league standings, Granite baseballers captured third place with a 7-5 win-loss record, finishing one game behind West and South, who deadlocked for first. In preseason the Farmers, bolstered by thirteen sophomore rookies, posted victories over Granger, Jordan, Weber, Tooele, and Hillcrest, falling only to Ben Lomond. Led by pitcher Gary Arnoldus, Granite downed East and Skyline, 9-2 and 5-1, but failed to score against West in a 9-0 route. With Steve Lowe on the mound in the second duel against West, the Farmers, again unable to contain the hard-hitting Panthers, lost to the '63 champs, 7-2. Edged by Highland in their first contest, Granite defeated the Rams in the final game of the season with Steve Lowe picking up the mound victory. Throughout season, Farmers relied on Ken Nielson, Scott Mayne, and Ken Beck, All-State first baseman, who set new RBI record at 15, for batting power. Defeating Olympus, 3-0, Granite lost to Skyline, 12-10; South, 3-2, in '64 season.

Signaled by Granite's Coach Jim Hill to steal home, catcher Scott Harrison starts from third base after a Leopard out-fielder catches a sacrifice fly in Granite's game with East.

teach Yah Yah cheer for early-season football games

Varsity cheerleaders Sandy Beesley, Pam Allison, Nanci Brock, Joy Christensen, Keith Kendall, Gene Hansen, Kim Young practice the routine for "Echo Cheer."

Up at five on brisk summer mornings, the seven Granite cheerleaders, directed by Mrs. Hyatt, practiced the "Clapping Chant" to prepare for early season football games. Decked in checkered blouses and shirts, the three boys and four girls bounced onto the auditorium stage yelling "Welcome Sophomores" during the Sophomore Orientation Assembly in August. Their cheers vibrated the gym during pep assemblies as the faculty echoed "Competition" against sophomores, juniors, and seniors. Starting a new tradition at Granite, cheerleaders not only led the "Song of the G" after each assembly, but after every game. Echoing "Yet will return in our memories," they recalled the day Keith bounded down the gym floor but forgot to flip, the night Gene spent the entire "Yah, Yah" cheer trying to lift Joy on his shoulders, and the moment after the game when Sandy, Pam, and Nanci, with tears streaming down their bewildered faces, stared at the illuminated score board — Granite 82 . . . East 83.

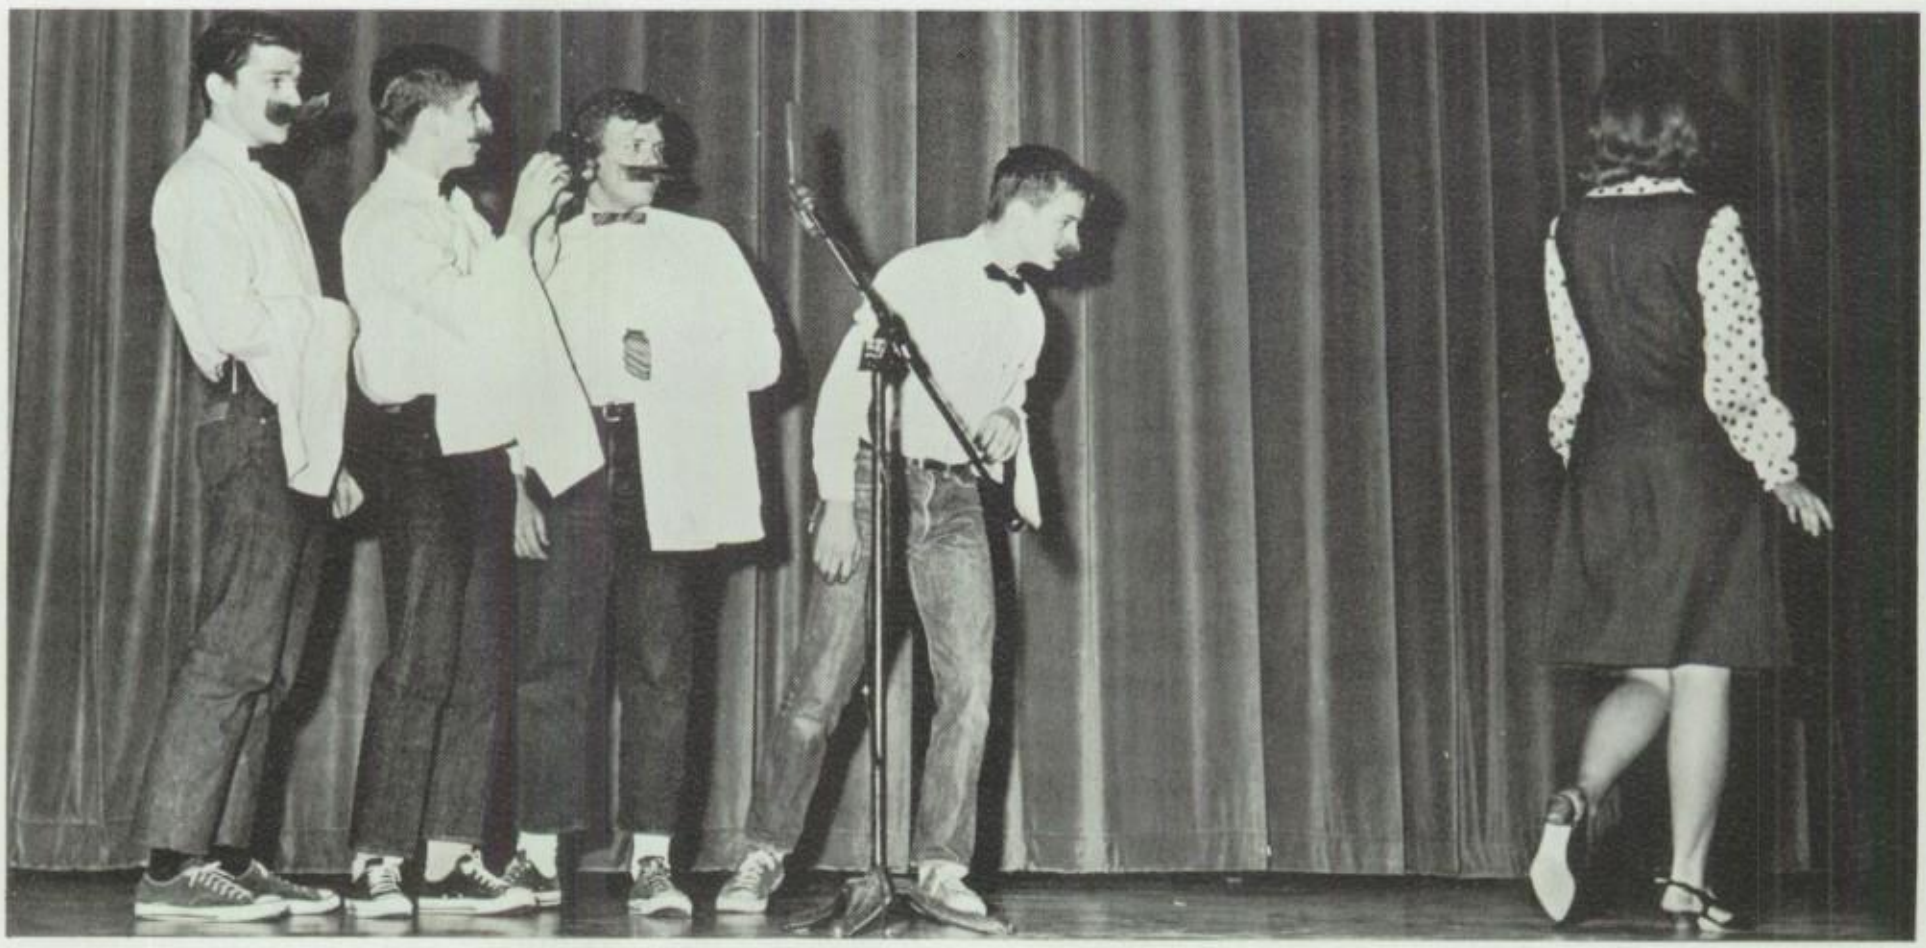
feature satire in an over-crowded auditorium

Book reports, themes, and tests willingly cast aside, students hurriedly filed into the over-crowded auditorium or the congested gymnasium to attend class, pep, and club assemblies on varying themes. Featuring their own version of leap year in "Turnabout", the Senior Class satirized the typical girl-chase-boy routine when Pam Allison tried desperately to secure a date with the irresistable Ryan Searle or Earl Ohlson. In the Pep Club's comical imitation of Little Red Riding Hood, Jane Ludwig played Red Hot and Tom Jenkins took the role of the frustrated Wolfie in their assembly, "Lady in Red." Starring in the faculty portrayal of a beautiful far-island paradise, King Thorum ordered an all-out search for his glamorous wife and beloved queen Miss Nell Madsen. On the sophomore assembly, "Show and Tell", a spoof on elementary school, held early in February, Aleta Sloan dreamed, "When I grow up I want to be a famous ballerina and dance for people all over the world."

Famous melodramatic author Ginger Vaughn introduces and prompts the cast of her latest play during the Girls' League assembly "Getting To Know You."



Roger Tidwell, Brent Evans, Scott Mayne, and Mike Brown harmonize to "Standing on the Corner Watching All the Girls Go By," in spite of the distraction presented by fair damsel sauntering across the stage before them. During the Girls' League assembly the quartet brought back memories of the twenties.

Bonnie Johnson and Bruce Lewis, as Mary and Joseph in "The Sound of Christmas," portray the seasonal story of the birth of Christ, with the Three Wisemen and the Little Drummer Boy, Linda Gardner, bearing precious gifts.

Kathy Stanley, third place winner of the Talent Assembly, sings "Madame Butterfly."

"It costs only five dollars," stresses janitor Kim Young to Chick Clayton (Steve Allen) during a yearbook sales commercial on the Hello Day Assembly.

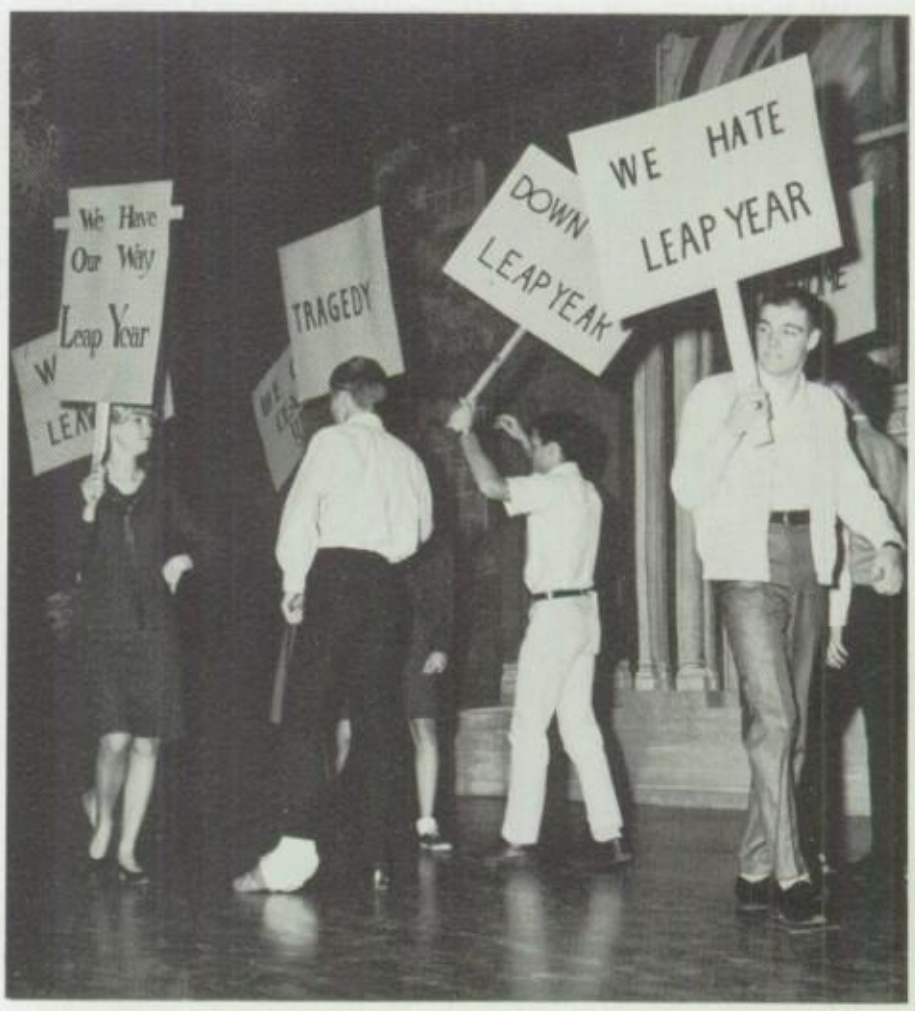
Stammgaeste Shoko Aogaichi, Sue Ashurst, Linda Gardner, and Rick Roberts crunch pretzels and clap time to the German Band's "Lichtensteiner Polka."



On the Senior Class assembly, boys chant "We hate leap year," in a demonstration against the girls who keep asking them for a date to the Senior Prom.

Amid screams and shouts of girl admirers, Alex Churchich, alias Ringo Starr, drums to the rhythm of "Twist and Shout" on the annual Boys' League assembly.

assemblies

combine comedy, music, and modern dance

A warm welcome and the witty performances of Doug Wahlquist and Kim Young sparked the annual Hello Day assembly for Granitians, who excitedly anticipated the new school year. The Concert Choir, Junior Choir, Boys' Chorus, and Girls' Chorus harmonized during the Thanksgiving assembly. The Christmas Cantata combined music and modern dance to portray Christmas throughout the world. "Getting to Know You", the Girls' League assembly, revived the rollicking spirit of the nineteen twenties with flappers, a melodrama, and Kent Davis' proposal to Bruce Jones. Galloping through the can-can, imitating the internationally famous Beatles, and mocking well-known television commercials, the Boys' League entertained with the Fink Allen Show. Dr. Livingstone and Stanley led an educational tour of the African jungle, pointing out dancing crickets, botanical wonders, and hungry cannibals. Traditionally ending the year, the Farewell assembly brought a realization that this was last assembly until September.

During the Christmas Cantata, Jeanne Larsen curtsies to the messengers who bring four calling birds from her true love on the fourth day of Christmas.

selects jury from audience for courtroom drama

Twenty-one dramatists memorized lines of dialogue, concentrated on placement on stage, and slaved to capture the true character of their parts to present The Night of January 16 during November. The three-act drama, directed by Norman Riggs, opened with the selection of twelve people from the audience to serve as the jury, who later pronounced a verdict of "guilty" or "not guilty". Addressing the jury in an attempt to prove Joy Christensen guilty of the murder of Bjorn Faulkner, District Attorney Dave Schultz introduced witnesses, who remained seated in the audience before being called to testify. Prime witnesses for the prosecution were Linda Gardner, a dancer who proved that Faulkner was planning to commit a fake suicide; Donna Catmull, maid to Faulkner who showed that Joy and Andy Roberts conspired to kill Faulkner; and Kathy Stanley, wife of deceased. However, Defense Attorney Greg Karch displayed evidence that Joy did not commit the deed, but that John Maxwell killed Faulkner.

Revealing that Faulkners and Joy's plan of secretly leaving the country has gone astray. Andy Roberts explains to Joy Christensen that Faulkner is dead.

After the selection of jury members from the audience, Greg Karch, attempting to prove John Graham Whitfield guilty of the murder of Bjorn Faulkner, introduces the defense's case against him. "The Night of January 16," directed by Norman Riggs and assisted by Ed Neslen, was presented on November 29 and 30.

"My daughter was not in the least jealous of Miss Andre," answers John Maxwell, prosecution witness, on cross-examination by defense attorney, Greg Karch.

To seal her oath, Donna Catmull kisses the Bible held by Johnny Linville, before testifying to events she witnessed as maid to Faulkner and Karen Andre.

Called to appear as prime witness, Linda Gardner struts down the aisle before testifying that Faulkner revealed plans of committing a fake suicide.

In front of a majestic white Southern mansion, Aleta Sloan and her partner dance to the lively music of Dale Jorgenson's orchestra at the Senior Prom.

Changed to a prom, the senior dance — Seven Oakes — portrayed a southern plantation. A dark Everglade swamp filled with birds, a breath-taking formal garden with a white statue spouting water, and a field with real cotton surrounded the stately snow-white mansion and its long veranda. At the annual yearbook dance, Scheherazade, a name taken from the Arabian Nights, students viewed an exotic decor of reds, pinks, and purples. Circling a gold embossed replica of the school seal, net draped from the center of the ceiling. Besides the stenciled Lamp of Knowledge and the silhouetted Taj Mahal, crepe paper streamers adorned the walls of this Persian palace. To promote Christmas spirit, the Pep Club sponsored Angel's Dream. Passing through the golden gates of heaven, students signed the angel's record book, gazed at the angels flying around the suspended golden harp, and discovered a white Christmas tree with blue ornaments under a ceiling of tumbleweed and angel hair clouds.

transport Granitians into mythical paradise

Venturing across a Chinese bridge into the wonderland of Shangri La, Don Williamson and his date glance at the misty waterfall dotted with silver glitter.

A mythical Tibetan paradise, Shangri-La, the 1964 Junior Prom, transported Granitians into a Far Eastern scene of snow-capped, sleeping volcanoes with a gaily painted oriental village nestled among the peaks, minature white pagodas, and a foaming waterfall recreated by murals. Crossing over the arching bridge, couples found themselves enclosed in a towering pagoda of translucent blues and greens, hung with Japanese lanterns. A sidewalk cafe and Parisian art gallery set the saucy French Flair. With a kaleidoscopic array of rainbow colors revolving in a brilliant color wheel for the ceiling, the central white pillared gazebo and the music of the Stewart Grow Orchestra combined to create a Continental atmosphere. Screened by streamers of green crepe paper, a black silhouetted New York skyline and the Statue of Liberty, with a shining lamp, decorated the sophomore dance, Sidewalks of New York. Alumni couples capped Homecoming festivities with Gridiron Swing.

create school spirit, enthusiasm, and unity

"What are you, the supervisor?" remarks Rose Marie Wable to her niece during the final night of chalking southern plantation murals for the Senior Prom.

Challenged with new ideas and activities, Granitians struggled through a year of fun, tears, and anticipation. In October they maneuvered wagons, trailers, crepe paper, and cardboard into empty garages to construct floats for the Homecoming Parade. Before the Thanksgiving Holidays, shocked and tearful faces replaced smiling ones at the news of President Kennedy's assassination, while participants of The Night of January 16 rescheduled performances and exchanged tickets to show respect for the fallen leader. In February students abandoned books and crowded buses to the State Basketball Tournament in Ogden to cheer the Granite five to sixth place honors. During 'G' Week Granitians donned plaid shirts and straw hats on Farmer Day, played hop-scotch and tetherball on Kiddie Day, and dunked Mr. Rasmussen and Ted Alsop in the Senior Class Dunking Booth at the Carnival. On Lagoon Day Farmers nibbled pop corn and ice cream before riding the roller coaster or playing golf.

Cries of "Me first!" "Don't forget me, Santa," and "I want some, too," echo through the gym during the Junior Class Christmas party as Santa Claus tosses candy canes to excited Farmers. Proving that alumni can be helpful, Ken Belka, former student body president, plays St. Nicholas in the traditional manner.

Dressed as kindergarten playmates, Linda Smith, Mary Lou Clark, Jeannie McDowell, and Pat Davidson enjoy a fast game of jacks in the girls' gym during the second day of 'G' Week. Trophies were given to the champion jack, hopscotch, and tether ball player.

Ann Carlson puts finishing touches on Mr. Sagapulo's door in competition for the Christmas Door Decorating contest.

"Oh, no! The string broke!" exclaims Christie Berrett to Penny Harris, Jessie Broadbent, Frances Coltharp, and Nancy Farnsworth as multi-colored balloons float down to ruin their afternoon tea.

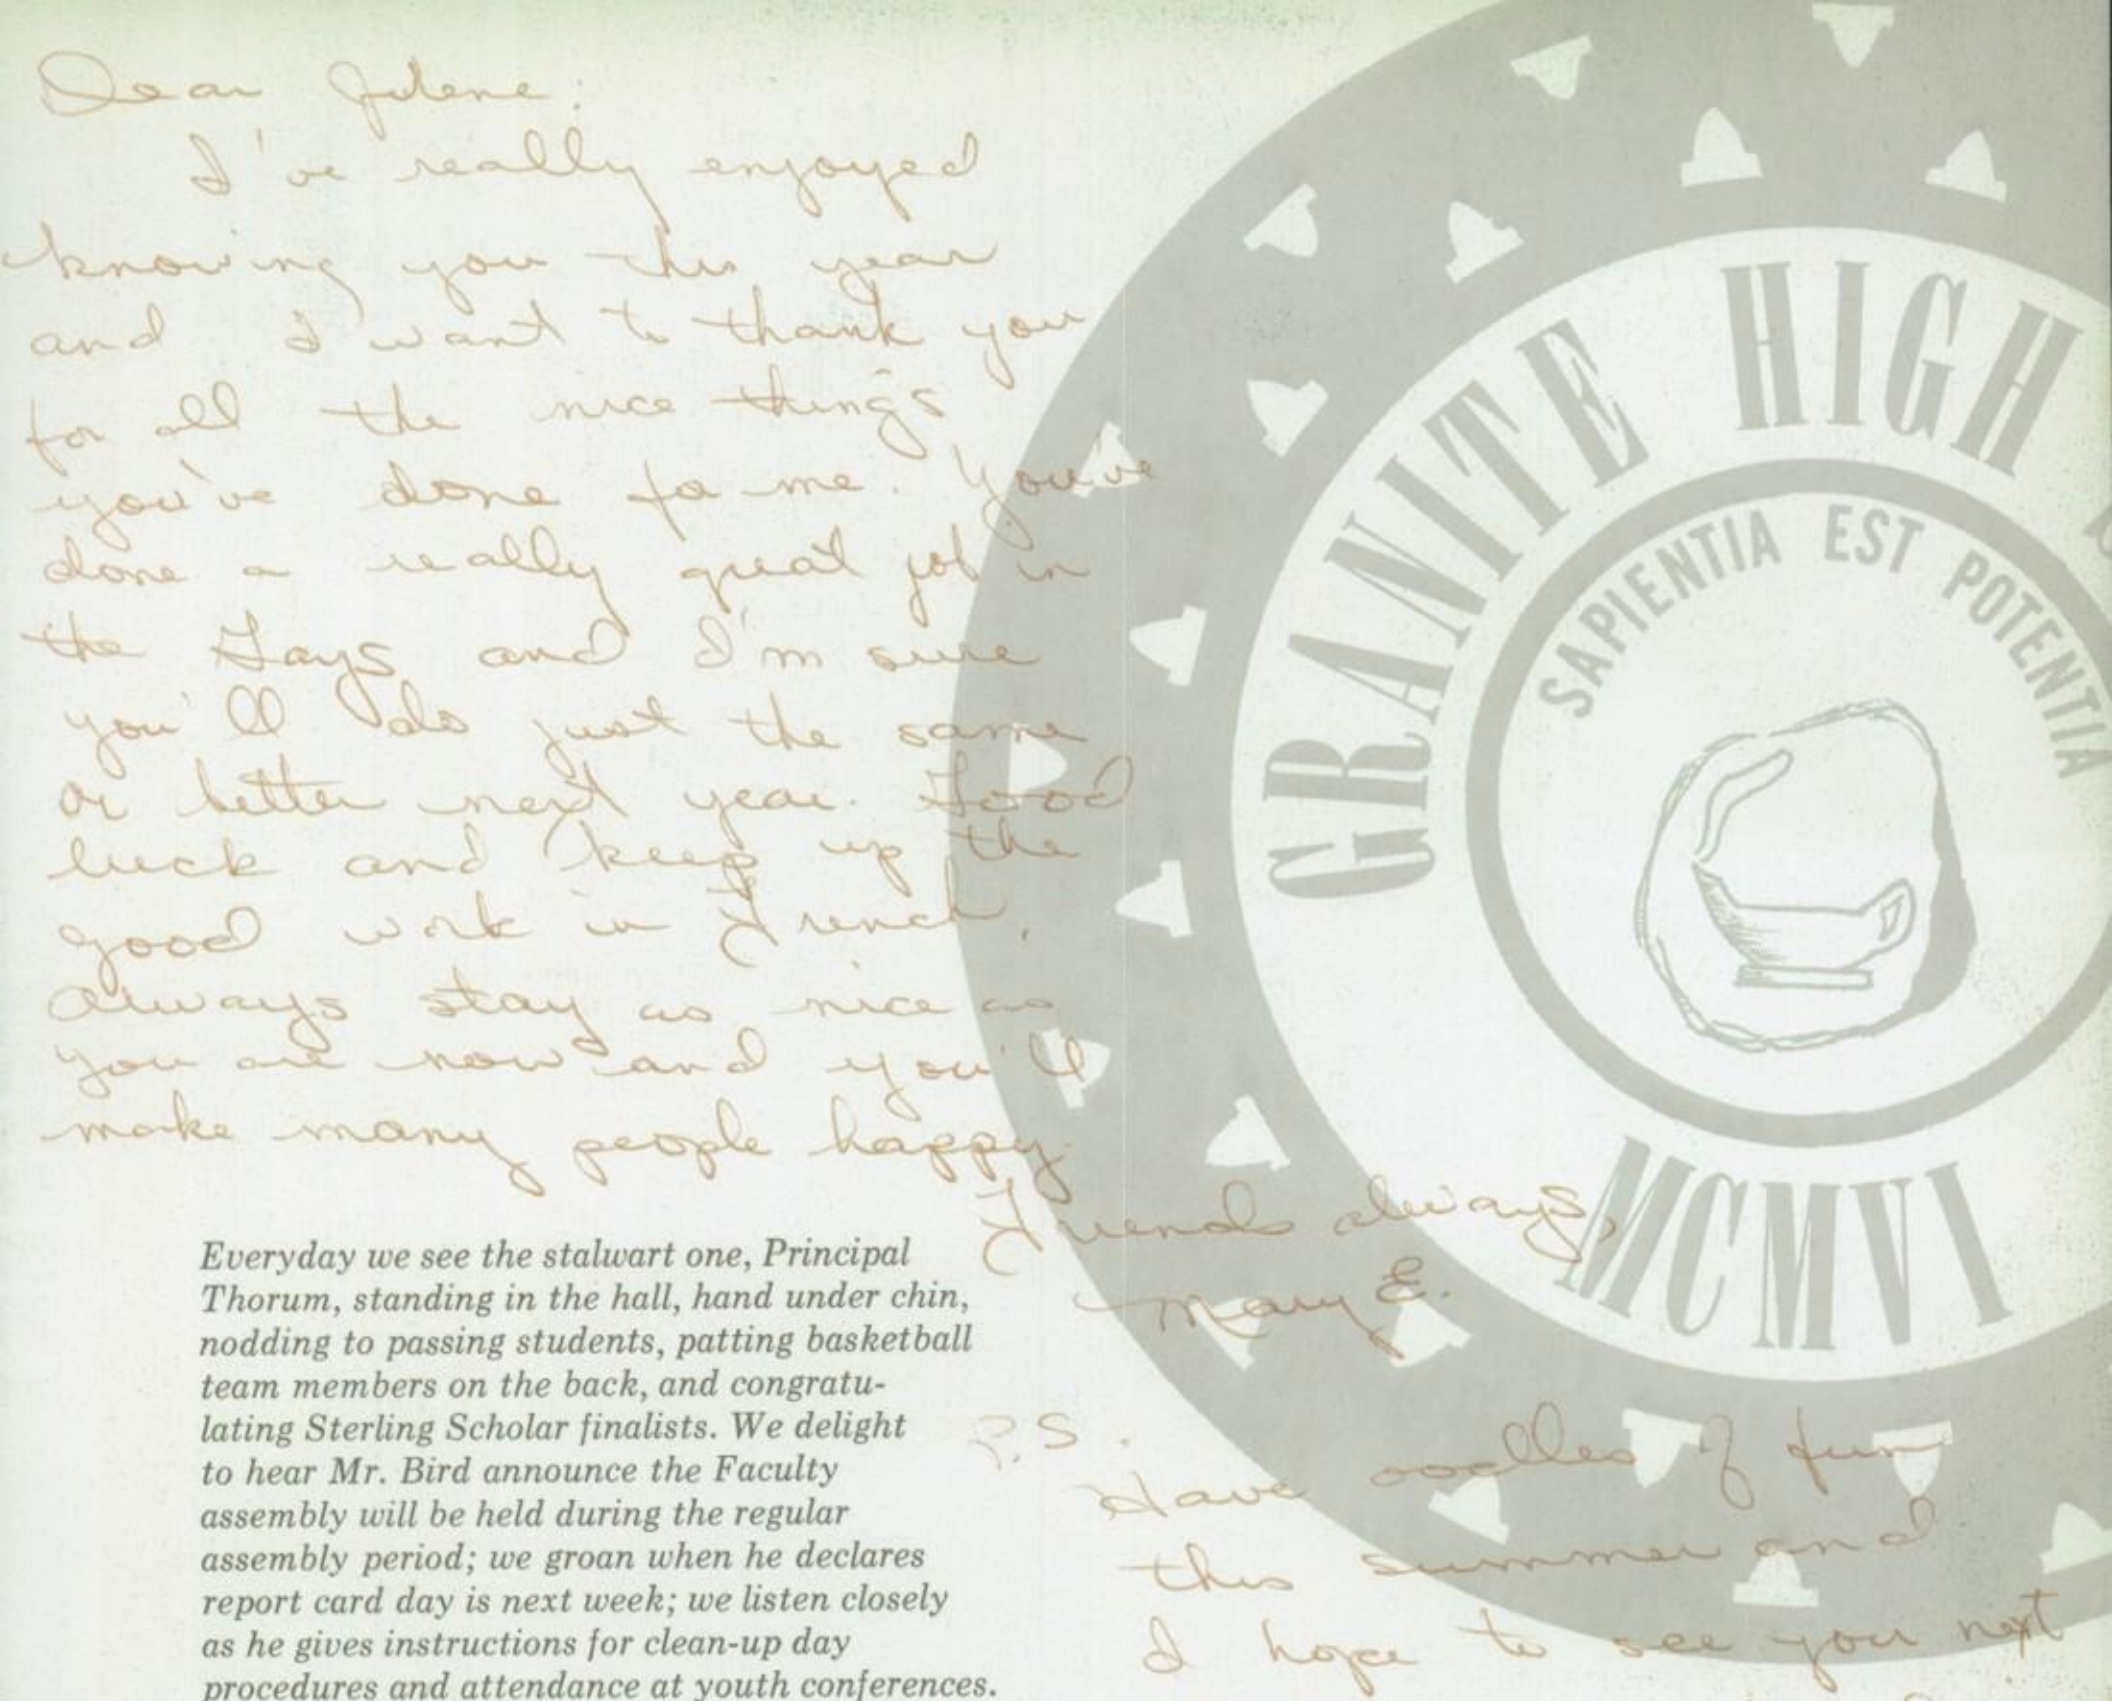
SCIENCE BVILDING



Everyday we see the stalwart one, Principal Thorum, standing in the hall, hand under chin, nodding to passing students, patting basketball team members on the back, and congratulating Sterling Scholar finalists. We delight to hear Mr. Bird announce the Faculty assembly will be held during the regular assembly period; we groan when he declares report card day is next week; we listen closely as he gives instructions for clean-up day procedures and attendance at youth conferences.

ADMINISTRATION

The rough rock of Granite, the boulder that was once used as the rostrum for pep rallies, has disappeared. But we have retained the power and force of a strong administration . . . an administration of wit and understanding.

Assistant Superintendent Kenneth Farrer

Administrative Assistant Ted Peterson

Superintendent Elmer J. Hartvigsen, an educator with thirty-five years experience, led in the formation of the Governor's Committee for Education. Superintendent Hartvigsen, W. Sterling Evans, and G. Kenneth Handley, Committee Chairmen, aided Governor Clyde in selecting the twelve-member commission. Dr. Orvil C. England, deputy superintendent of Granite School District, has served ably in his district post since 1957. Previous to that time he was an assistant of the history department at the University of Utah and principal of Olympus Junior High School. Dr. Kenneth Farrer, assistant superintendent of instruction for seven years, announced his resignation to the Board early in March. Dr. Farrer said he had accepted a position in California at the completion of the school year. Assistant superintendent of personnel, Dr. Ted T. Peterson, was first employed by Granite School District in 1949. Living for a short time in California, he earned his Doctor's degree from Stanford University in 1958.

Superintendent Elmer Hartvigsen

Granite School District's Board of Education — Forace Green, vice president; O. Thayne Acord, president; Jay O. Brinton, Mrs. Howard B. Summerhays and Kenneth C. Brown — held meetings twice a month in the wood-paneled Board Room to materialize plans for the construction of a new junior high in Kearns.

completes four-year renovation program at GHS

A worker from the district offices sorts 2,000 student information cards from Granite by running them through I.B.M. machine.

Busily planning changes in curriculum and registration process, the administration of Granite School District, ably led by Superintendent Elmer Hartvigsen, Deputy Superintendent Orvil England, and Assistant Superintendents Kenneth Farrer and Ted Peterson, supervised the completion of a four-year remodeling program at Granite High. The lunchroom and social room, finished early in the year, left only minor changes to be made during the summer months. Shortly after Christmas, district workmen completed a photography dark room in the "I" Building. In early spring drastic changes were made in registration methods. I.B.M. machines took over time-consuming process and classified two thousand student registration cards per minute. Other machines typed name and grade information for one hundred students every minute. The Board of Education also approved a new text for the Biology Department and effected a large scale district-wide building program to accommodate rapid growth in population.

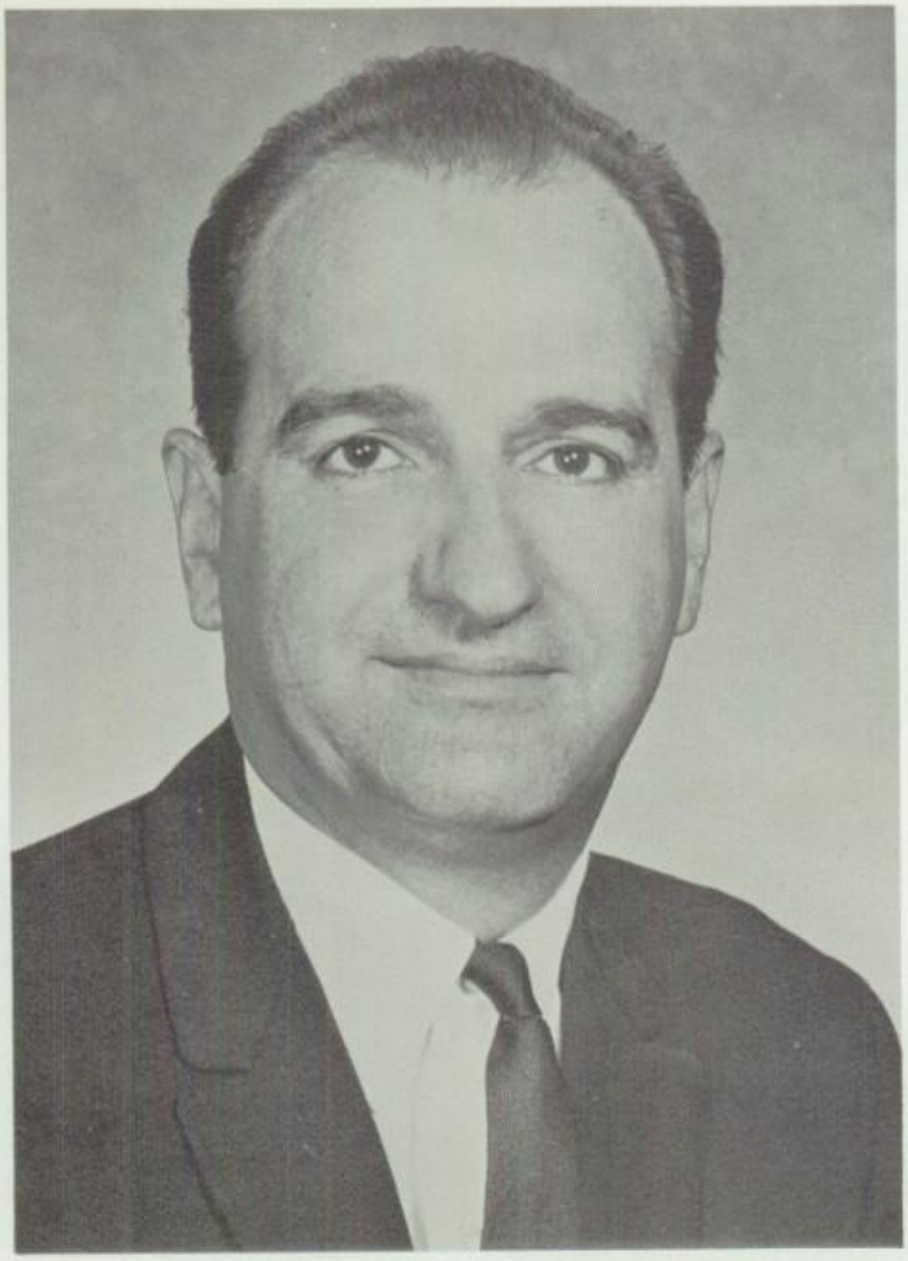
Principal Rheo F. Thorum

Waving a commanding finger on faculty assembly, Mr. Thorum orders, "Find the Queen."

During Junior Prom, Shangri La, Mr. Thorum greets Student Body Secretary Karen Galli.



Vice-Principal Leland Bird

Mr. Thorum, the tall quiet man seen standing outside the office during the break between classes, sitting on the bench with the teams, and talking with students, has a keen interest in Granite. In addition to being head executive, Principal Thorum was the key figure behind the 'G' Council, the historians, and the Student Body. Close to the students, he lectured the National Honor Society on the value of education and showed slides on his European tour to the Language Arts Club and the Future Teachers. Mr. Thorum acted as a adviser in student problems when the yearbook staff ran to him exclaiming, "Please get us a darkroom! You're the only man who understands!" Besides coordinating region activities, the Director of Region II High School Activities Association coached Little League baseball and presided over the Phi Delta Kappa Educational Fraternity during his spare time. The Farmers' principal and his son Ricky spend summers rock collecting, fishing, and most of all, just traveling. With the familiar "ding-dong" of the intercom, the cheery "Good morning, students" of Mr. Leland Bird greeted Farmers five mornings a week. The dark-eyed systematic assistant principal arranged the school calendar, acquainted new teachers with school policy, and also supervised the IBM report cards.

Because of the enthusiasm that he displayed in supporting the team this year, Mr. Thorum was awarded an honorary spot on the bench.

welcome two new members to staff

Mrs. Mary Campbell, the new sophomore girls' counselor, explains to a student that two classes of Physical Education are required for graduation from school.

Twenty-one hundred baffled Granitians consulted seven counselors day after day with their problems. Sophomores, adjusting to their new life at Granite, scurried to Mary Campbell and William Christopulos, who adjusted the schedules and checked attendance. Senior boys ,concerned with military obligations, college applications, and scholarship opportunities, questioned Russell Magleby, who also supervised the ten Sterling Scholars. Senior girls, plagued by college choices, hurried to Leah Merrill, who completed the white scholarship blanks, revised senior girls' curriculum, and called homes to check on absences. Junior girls bustled to Ann Pehrson, who organized faculty socials, helped plan the Girls' League activities, and sponsored the Honor Society. Junior boys ran with their varied problems to Keith Bergstrom, who sponsored the Student Body Officers, Senate, and the House of Representatives. Granitians, harried by tests, rushed to Easton Moffitt, who administered NMS, PSAT, ACT, and GATB tests.

After working all summer lining up teachers, preparing registration, and readying classroom schedules, Edith Lee, Mavis Christensen, Wynona Cottrell, and Della Thomson welcomed 2100 Farmers to a new year. Mr. Bird's co-pilot, Edith Lee, supervised intercom announcements, issued textbooks, and distributed report cards. Signs declaring "Frantic Dept." and "If you have troubles, go—that-a-way—" decked Mavis' desk, where she answered the telephone, arranged Mr. Thorum's appointments, watered office plants, scheduled events on the school calendar. Training 20 girls to assist in the office, Wynona signed in late students, compiled absentee lists, and filed yellow and blue slips in steel file cabinets. Isolated in the bookstore, Della balanced books, paid school bills, and made out payrolls for teachers. Cries of "I lost my locker key!" and "May I buy a blue ink cartridge?" greeted the vivacious brunette as seniors, juniors, and sophomores pestered her daily for pens, pencils, paper and lab books.

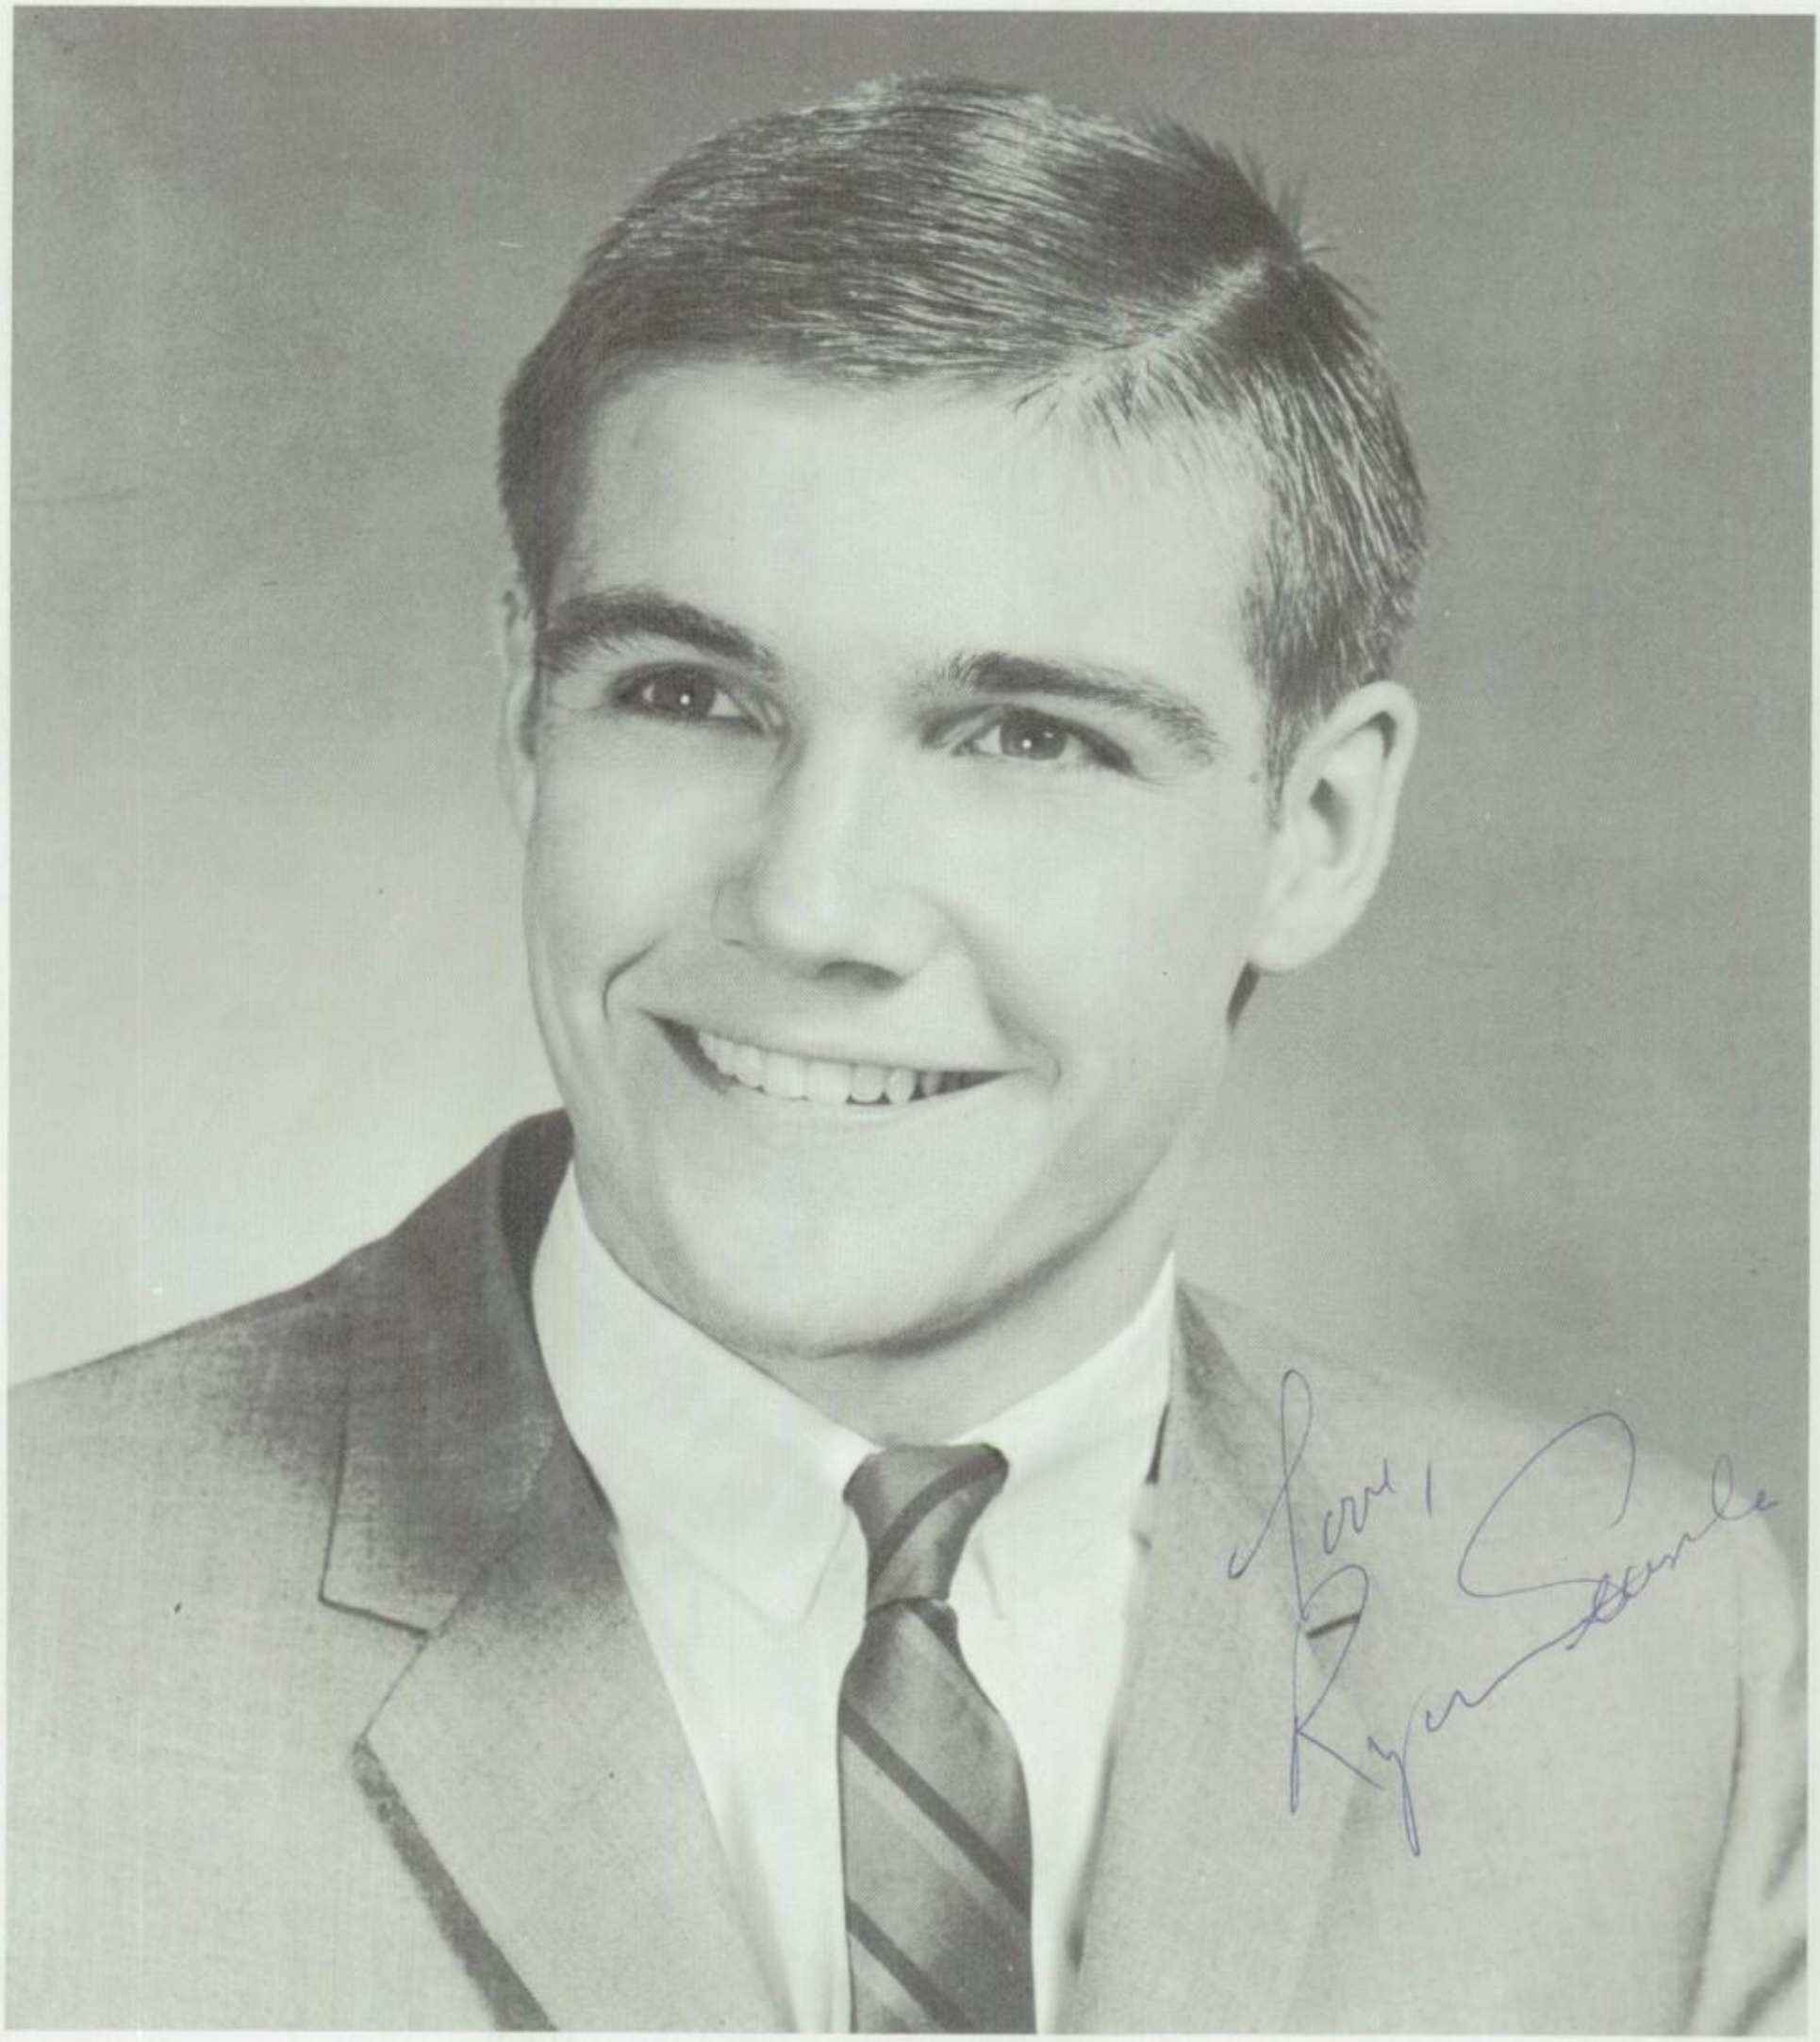
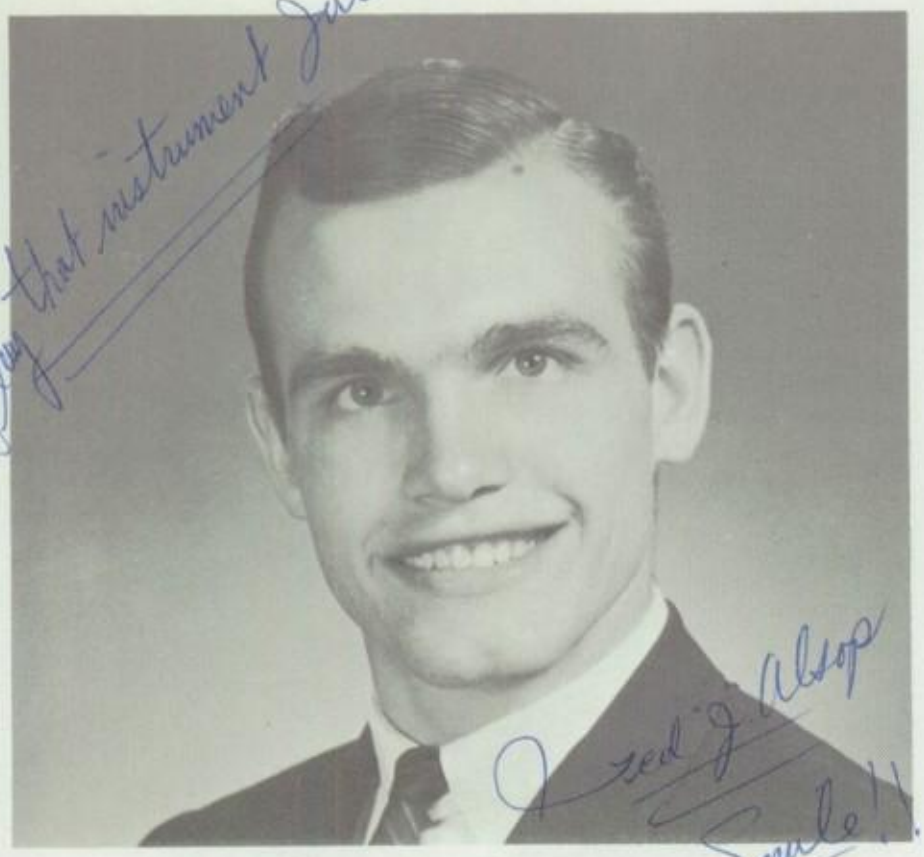
plan Homecoming around "Symbol of a Farmer"



President Ryan Searle



Vice President Ted Alsop

Secretary Karen Galli

Historian Donna Catmull

Historian Sandy Case

Our administrative trio—Ryan, Ted, and Karen—combined rare resourcefulness, genuine friendliness, and overwhelming enthusiasm to provide organization, direction, and drive for student activities this year. Marooned in the remodeled student body room, the trio industriously planned Homecoming activities to the theme of "Symbol of a Farmer". Ambitious, capable, and dedicated, Ryan presided over 'G' council meetings, conferred with Mr. Thorum, and announced election rules over the PA. Devoted, willing, and energetic, Ted coordinated distribution of 'G' week programs, prodded the Senate into action, and organized the printing of the 'G' book. Talented, vivacious, and adept, Karen straightened their den, arranged announcements on the bulletin board, and corresponded with other schools. Historians, Sandy Case and Donna Catmull, gathered clippings from newspapers, interrupted Mr. Thorum for records to place in "The Time Machine", and ravaged yearbook files for pictures to use in school scrapbook.

senate and house

discuss proposed constitutional amendments

FR: Ilene Garcia, Carol Samuelson, Susan Gustin. SR: Jane Ludwig, Karen Galli, Kathy Fenstermaker, Diana Loock. BR: Ted Alsop, Bruce Nelson, Lowell Barrowes.

The nine members of the Senate meandered each October afternoon to the studnt body room to publish the 'G' book. Confronted with the choice of a cover, they searched through twenty-five entries made by the students of the art department, selecting a cover design by Brent Bruesch. Searching for errors in spelling, punctuation, capitalization, and also structure, the senators grabbed their pens and scribbled red ink corrections across the 'G' book galley sheets. In January, meeting jointly with the seventy-seven members of the House of Representatives, the students crowded into the orchestra room to discuss proposed amendments to the school constitution. After screaming, "The administration isn't mentioned in the constitution," beating the bass drum perched in the back of the band room, and pounding their fists on the desks, the members finally passed amendments to alter the school name to the Associated Students of Granite High School and change Speaker of House to an elective post.

Representatives met once a month in the orchestra room to pass needed bills.

"Oh, no! Look at what the House of Representatives did to our cheerleader bill," groans Senate president Ted Alsop to senators Carol Samuelson, Carolyn Gallucci, and Senate secretary Karen Galli during an after-school meeting.

"g" council

Sponsors 'G' week activities with school carnival

To obtain a variety of booths for the 'G' Week carnival, Ryan Searle and Ken Bradshaw encourage the 'G' Council adviser, Keith Bergstrom, to phone Lagoon.

With hammers rapping, staplers clicking, and boxes thumping, the "G" council members built booths for dart throwing, set up lead bottles for baseball throwing, braced a two by eight foot log for sawing, and filled a dunking machine with water to drench Mr. Rasmussen and Mr. Lindquist for the final activity of "G" week, the carnival. Besides the carnival, the organization, under the leadership of the club presidents and class officers, outlined "G" week activities with Kindergarten Day, Teachers' Appreciation, and Farmer Day. They also suggested a historical presentation of the history of Granite High, which the historians assembled and called the "Time Machine." Completing these festivities in March, the advisory board in April served as judges for the student body elections, counted votes, organized Clean-up Day with the help of Mr. Brady, and nominated students with academic and service achievements for the Outstanding Granitian, awarded at annual Honor Banquet.

attend early morning meetings on Tuesdays

Basketball ushers, Danny Bell and Brent Evans, sweep the gym floor during half-time after the Granite Pep Club had scattered pom-pom strands over the court.

Tuesday at 7:10 a.m. in Mr. Robert Rasmussen's home room, fifty-one weary-worn assembly ushers, clad in blue sweatshirts, shuffled into an early meeting, sat down, and discussed the difficulty of sophomore and junior seating arrangements in pep rallies. With sponsors—Mr. Rasmussen and Mr. Brady—Kent Davis, president, and Larry Christensen, secretary, worked on an effective plan to cover the auditorium and gymnasium by placing alert ushers at well-known trouble spots to oust whisperers, disturbers, and booers during assemblies. Ten additional basketball ushers in olive-green sport coats escorted parents, friends, and special guests to reserved seats at home games during the season. Led by Gary Guest, the senior and junior members in small blue-trimmed red felt derbies, initiated a special Booster section to encourage school spirit. After assisting with the Boys' League Fathers and Sons' dinner, the ushers planned an early March dinner-dance before welcoming the new members for next year.

invites guests to speak on Peace Corps

After endless debates had ceased, firey tempers had cooled, and parliamentary procedure had closed, thirty National Honor Society members delved into Problems of American Society as their major project. Led by President Paul Palmer, participants invited guests to speak on the Peace Corps or the first activity. As the academic year progressed, Gordon Park and Carol Samuelson, after spending countless hours on Saturdays to do research, arranged for the scholars to visit the State Hospital at Provo as part of the study on mental health. Droopy-eyed during seven o'clock meetings, students devised the annual assembly and planned an evening induction for parents and new members. Following their goal of service, they presented "This Earth Is Mine" in February for the student body. Initiating a scholarship to be awarded to a top senior, they served hot lunch to finance the project. Throughout the year, they strived for fulfillment of their purpose — to develop scholarship, leadership, character, and service.

"Ten cents for that!" exclaims Terry Granger to Marion Oates and Ruby Bolander who charge him three cents extra for an Honor Society scone at the carnival.

Looking over records of the money secured from dues, the carnival, and the show, Honor Society officers — Peggy Morgan, April Tsuya, Raleigh Davis, adviser Ann Pehrson, and Paul Palmer — plan to award a scholarship for outstanding citizenship at the honor banquet.

After analyzing topics of foreign aid, world events, communism, and social problems, Margo Rodgers jots down suggestions made by other executive board members — Sandy Case, Terry Granger, and Gorden Park — to study Peace Corps.

We have worked together — studying for college entrance examinations, practicing solos for the Easter Cantata, and perfecting lines or the school play, "The Night of January 16th." We have had fun together — crowding chartered buses in March with wet feet, mud-spattered clothes, and straight hair to cheer the basketball team at tournament games, singing, "This Land Is Your Land" at club hootenannys, and laughing at Lena Leap Year and her many male hecklers on the Senior Class assembly.

CLASSES

The blue and white acorns represent our growth at Granite — a growth from a football team with one girl, to a team of forty that wins championships; from a class of thirty-two, to a class of 450 in the district's largest school.

seniors conduct classes during teacher recess

Artist Peggy Morgan smears brown, green, and white chalk on flimsy newsprint, creating a large cottonfield for the Senior Prom plantation, Seven Oakes.

With murals of mossy swamps and a majestic southern mansion, tired, chalk-smeared seniors presented Seven Oakes, the Senior Prom. Hoping for a date to the dance, girls on the Senior Class assembly took advantage of leap year and called boys for dates but received answers of "I just washed my hair and can't do a thing with it." After February came the class party. To the beat of the Highway Surfers, seniors screamed "Is that me?" while glancing at baby pictures. With these activities behind them, the upperclassmen, anticipating graduation, crammed for finals in Trig and Chemistry, rushed to teachers with scholarship forms, and struggled through college entrance exams. Finally, after earning the minimum eighteen credits, graduates, in royal blue and snow white gowns, mounted the flower-strewn stage on graduation night. Clutching their long awaited diplomas, boys offered handkerchiefs to girls as the graduating class of '64 flipped tassels to the right side of their caps and sang "Song of the G".

Carefully watching their step, Nancy Martindale and David Taylor cross an antique bridge at Shangri-La, the Junior Class name for the annual Prom.

In charge of the largest class at Granite, the Junior Class officers — Vince Faggioli, Steve Akimoto, and Linda Cahoon—transformed the gym into Shangri La, a Junior Prom replica of the perfect paradise in James Hilton's Lost Horizon. After weeks of preparing sketches, consulting Mr. Neslen, painting murals, and renting antique bridges, officers created the oriental atmosphere in pastel shades of crepe paper and water colors. At their party, Christmas Caper, they introduced past student body president Ken Belka as a tall thin Santa Claus to laughing classmates. In March the active trio operated a picture booth for the 'G' Week Carnival, and in April, with Frank Zigrossi, as Cinderella, Kim Winters as the Fairy Godmother, Sandy Butterfield as Snow White, and Diana Sorensen as Little Goldilocks, they portrayed a series of exaggerated nursery stories on their annual assembly, Fractured Fairy Tales. At parties and proms during year, Vince, Steve, and Linda represented Farmers at Highland, South, West, Weber.

Mr. Robert Rasmussen, taking careful aim at the UN Club's penny board, tosses a coin at its small target to win a giant stuffed rabbit. confused by geometric deductions on PSAT test

On the Sophomore Class assembly, Show and Tell, Hanne Bendsten, Jeannene LeVitre, and Sue Pulver, kindergarten students, harmonize to "All That You Are."

Challenged with new responsibilities, the Sophomore Class plunged into the year's activities with enthusiasm and wonder. To lead them through the maze of unfamiliar events, the sophomores chose Greg Karch, Danny Bell, and Cherie Burkinshaw as leaders of Granite's largest class. Acquainting themselves with the campus at a pre-school assembly, the future Granitians enjoyed ice-cream sandwiches and practiced the "Song of the G". After weeks of planning finances, searching frantically for a replica of the statue of liberty, and painting black silhouetted skyscrapers, the sophomores presented Sidewalks of New York. With the help of the Junior Varsity cheerleaders, class officers called every sophomore in the 'G' Book and invited them to a Come-as-You-Are party in the gym. In November they donned short pants and pinafores for their class assembly, Show and Tell. Swarming into gym for pep rallies and assemblies, students captured title of "slowest class" and won the turtle, Sophie, in reward.

Good Old Jrlene -

What would I ever have done without you this year. You have been so wonderful to me. Gee, I'll never know how to repay you for everything. Thank you for being so good to me. You're one girl whose personality I truley admire and appreciate. There is no other girl who has been so kind to me as you have been in our history class. I'm sure you will be a big success when you get out of school.

MORE THAN A FRIEND

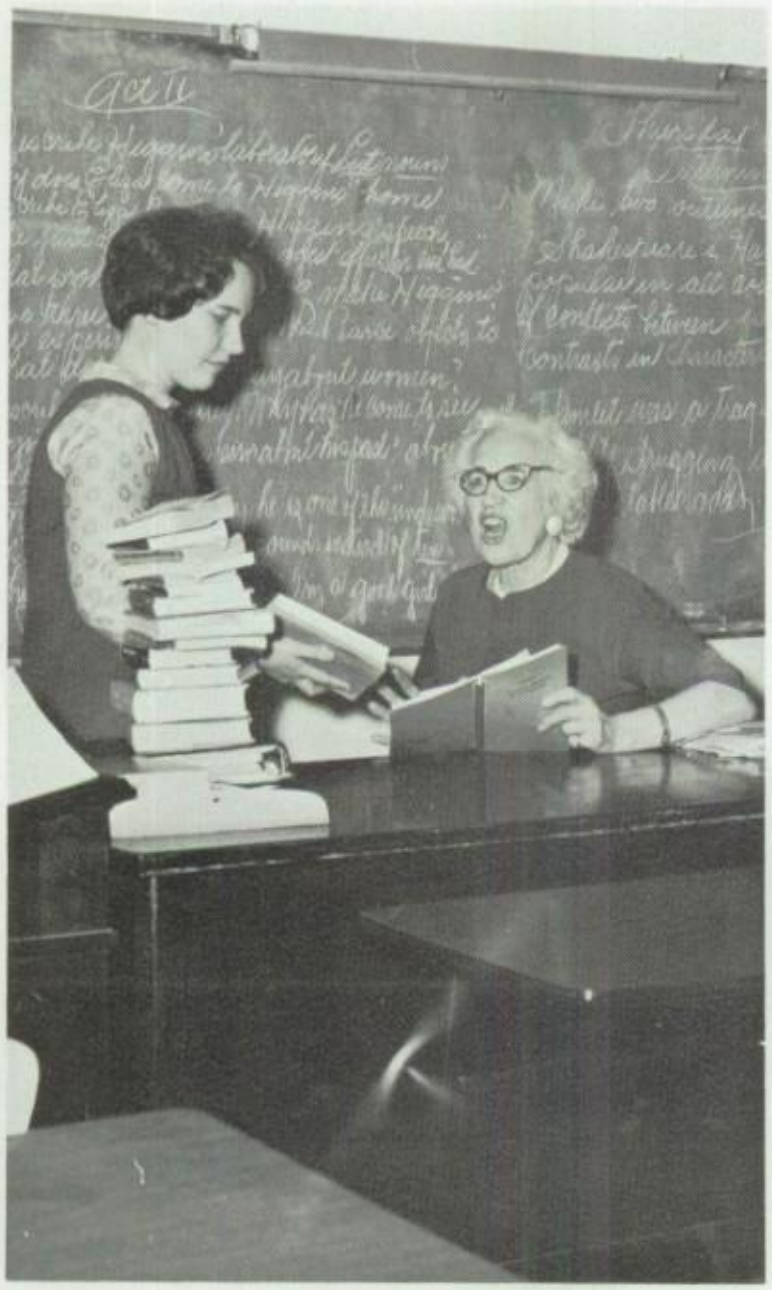
Helen Metcalf

We have worked toward the goals of former Granitians. We have seen them as businessmen in Philadelphia, senators in Washington, Peace Corps volunteers in the Far East, missionaries in France, and husbands, wives, and leaders here in Salt Lake City, Utah. For the attainment of our goals, we have transcribed weekly shorthand takes to build our dictation speed to 90 words per minute, transformed bacon grease into soap in the chemistry lab, and baked pecan brownies in home living.

CLASSROOMS

"Sapientia Est Potentia," embedded in the seal by the symbol of the Lamp of Knowledge, has inspired Granitians through the years to cultivate the arts and sciences and to enjoy the comforts and luxuries in a peaceful world.

In a thick South Carolina accent, Miss Gayle Cannon, a student teacher for Miss Beverly Olson, explains the setting and characters in "The Pearl" to a girl in her sixth period English class. Steinbeck's novel was required reading for all the sophomore students.



"Are you sure you have all of them?" questions Miss Nell Madsen as Carma Prescott hands her one of fourteen texts for a book check.

With their sophomore literature books close at hand, English students Deborah Beaslin, Lynn Ivie, and Carol Morrison prepare to listen to the recording of Shakespeare's Julius Caesar.

With jewelry, mats, and pottery, Dave Di Francesco, Lona Baker, and Jeannie Upwall display Indian craftsmanship representing customs in Mexico and South America in their Spanish class. Taught by Mrs. Gladys Thompson, the students study the language, culture, and political institutions of Spanish countries.

language arts

analyzes classics and modern literature

Listening to an informative lecture on the fifty gifted Greek writers, senior Keith Luthi takes notes in Mr. Kent Evans' fourth period English class.

French novices combatted conjugation, sentence construction, and article variations; and advanced classes delved into L'Alouette, Jean Anouilh's classic story of Joan of Arc. While German enthusiasts read fairy tales, short stories, memorized dialogues, and answered questions auf deutsch, e senor D'avila lectured the Spanish classes on the social customs of Latin America, based on his experience in both societies. Greek myths sprang to life for Honor English sophomores when they probed the Odyssey for present day allusions. Seniors studied Beowulf, the Anglo-Saxon epic of Grendel; Macbeth, the story of a man defeated by selfish ambition; and Lord of the Flies, unrelenting, haunting, startling. Juniors pored over the works of Whitman, Dickinson, and Poe to write original poetry. In public speaking, Farmers delivered readings from story books and lectured on the advantages of pipe-smoking. To gain more confidence, the orators gave heckler speeches, while fellow students engaged in badgering each other.

selects theme, "Knowledge Is Power"

Excited about using the theme, "Knowledge Is Power", the yearbook staff rushed to the seal in front of the 'S' building to count tiles, read inscriptions, and examine symbols. Sacrificing spare time to develop the tradition of the seal, the members labored feverishly to meet unyielding deadlines, counted characters to make copy blocks end right, and drew and redrew copy sheets to insure even margins. Disturbing Mr. Thorum with mad dashes to his office for approval of hair-brained schemes, begging Della for permission to use the phone, and monopolizing the auditorium for weeks, the group witnessed the creation of a yearbook. With afternoons filled and Saturdays booked, they began to call S-11 home. The staff and its editors — Mary Beth Crawford, Linda Gardner, and Kathy Warnick — rejoiced at the completion of a successful dance, Scheherazade; of an eye-catching float The Spirit of the G, which seized honorable mention at Homecoming; and of the final pages of the 1964 Granitian early in April.

"We're going to make our yearbook sales quota," sings Marilyn Dautrich to John Hartvigsen and Gary Guest, dressed in a white shroud of "Dead Memories."

Proofs of the Sterling Scholars are checked by the photography staff, Mel Soccamanno, Hans Flink, Bill Christensen, Larry Nelson, and Mr. Harold Richards.

After slaving over layouts, Ryan Searle, Dennis Goodspeed, Bayne McMillan, and Keith Luthi debate on copy assignments for varsity spring sports — track, golf, tennis, and baseball.

Margo Rodgers and Linda Cahoon file student registration cards during the seventh period to complete the 1964 yearbook count.

"First and most important, special separations of each color must be made," explains Mr. Ed Neslen to Coy Cutler, Miss Nell Madsen, Gordon Park, Sandy Case, Sue Ashurst, and Anne Boye at a summit meeting called to discuss the progress being made on the cover, chosen after heated debate on the design.

Newspaper adviser Joan Berry suggests changes in the front page of the Granitian to staff members Janet Robertson, Kathy Donnelly, Barbara Thornblad, Gloria Whetstone, Lori Dobson.

Copy writer Mike Birch, sports editor Dan Lewis, and sports writer Keith Luthi hunt for interesting pictures and finished copy for paper.

"We need only forty more papers," exclaims Betty Austir to Johanna West. Finishing a three-day ordeal, Janet Jensen and Charlotte Clement fold periodicals to mail exchanges between Granite and one hundred and fifty other schools.

The newspaper staff pushed monthly deadlines, pondered editorials, scrabbled through stacks of candid shots and sports photos, and prayed for those final few articles to finish the second page the week before publication date. Headed by Mari Ann Billhymer, editor-in-chief, the twenty-three member staff met in room S-10 first period before fanning out all over the campus to track down their big story. The Granitian featured a revolutionized format including "Portraits in Red and Blue," spotlighting outstanding Granitians; a new nameplate accenting page one with slanting black letters; and "Granitians Growl," completing the editorial page with opinions from the student body. "What do you mean there's no story? There has to be a story; I have a big hole in the front page!" and "Okay, who lost the 'Farmer Forecast'?" bounced around the room while Mrs. Joan Berry, adviser to the 1964 staff's newshounds, proofread, corrected, and initialed column after column of copy before sending it on to the printer.

To find ideas for a feature article, Sharon Odle, Nadine Stoddard, and Peggy Loveridge examine back issues of Post, Time, Newsweek, and Look magazines.

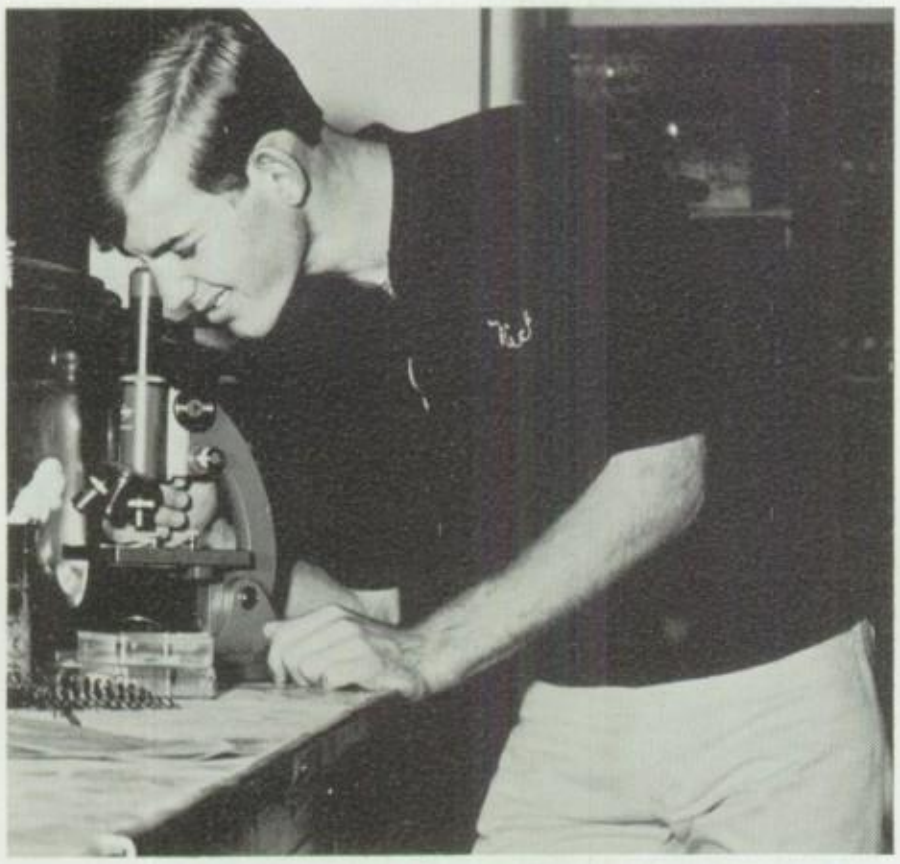
experiments with mirrors, lenses and chemicals

Senior chemistry student, Mike Henry, intently watches Mr. Harvey Hutchinson demonstrate the complicated technique of operating the analytical balance.

First year physics students, colliding nickels on an inclined plane to study atomic reactions, performing Young's experiment, and adjusting mirrors and lenses to find focal points, delved into complicated theories and principles of science. Between weekly pep talks on Friday and lectures on Communism by Mr. Hutchinson, chemistry hopefuls prepared hydrogen by collecting the gas in a hydrometer over sodium immersed in water. Chemical equilibrium, the mole method, and oxidation-reduction reactions held students to a twenty-minutes-a-night study schedule proposed by Mr. Hutchinson. Wet hay, rotten fruit, and moldy bread, ingredients in Mr. Skousen's "garbage garden," supplied the bacteria necessary to study the growth, colonization of bacteria, and resistance to medicines and antibiotics of micro-organism. In Mr. Sagapulo's third period zoology class, girls emitted a squeamish "Ooh" as they dissected spiders and snakes to explore anatomical features and working organs of living creatures.



Adjusting focus and light values, Rick Hall scans the field of his microscope in search of bacteria taken from a petri-dish covered with the tiny organisms.

Nancy Polteno and Steve Farrington gain insight into the intricacies of the human body as Mr. Madsen baffles them with the question, "And what is THIS?"

Algebra and Plane Geometry instructor, Miss Margaret Howe, explains the process of solving lithograms and the way of unraveling quadratic equations to puzzled junior students, Jeannie Tucker and Mike Brown, who are cramming for final examinations.

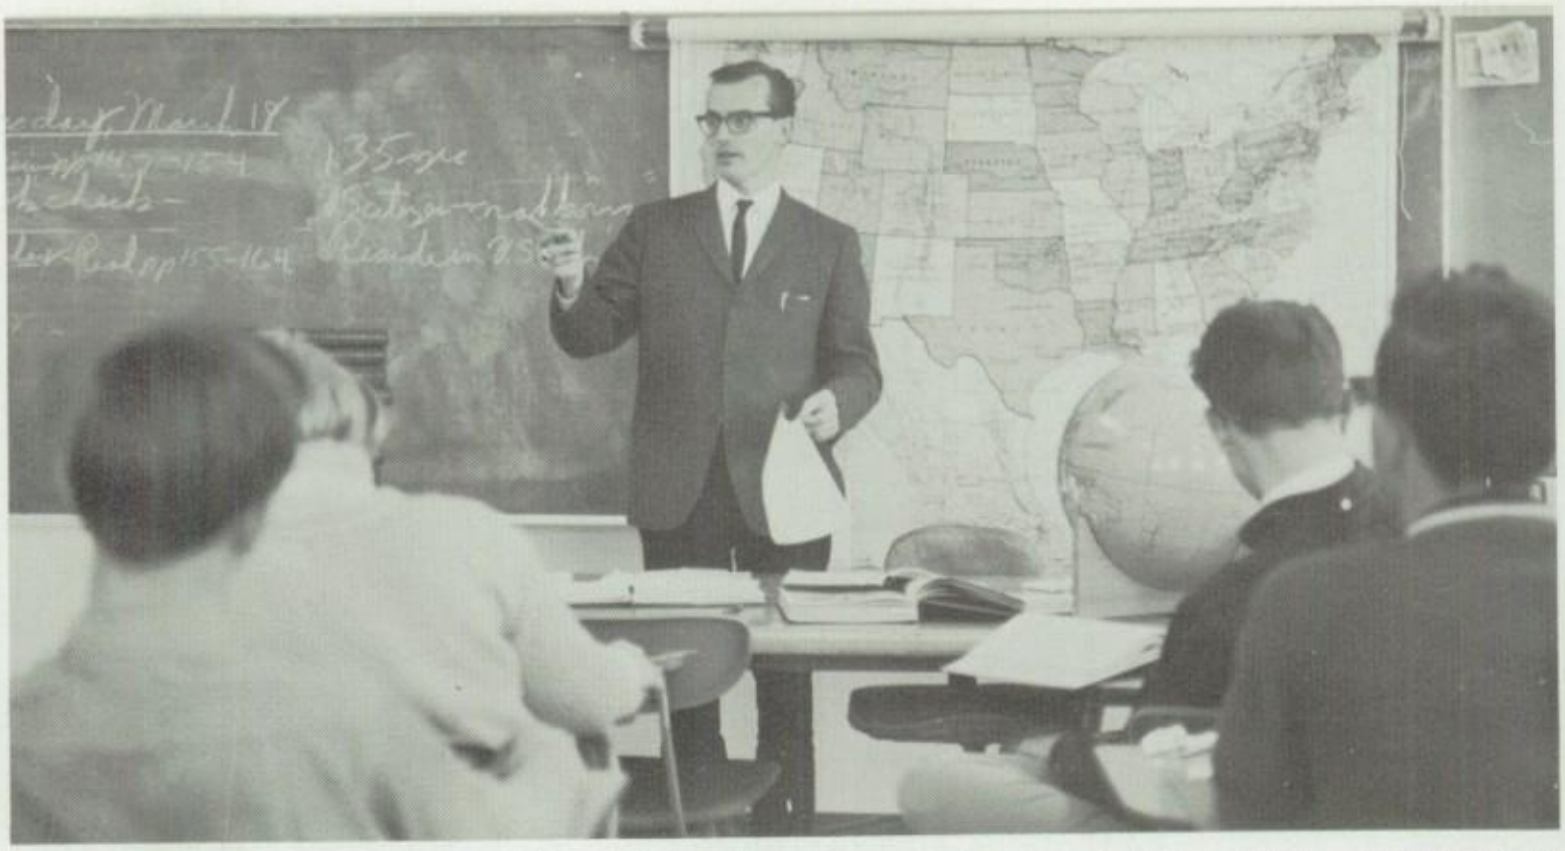
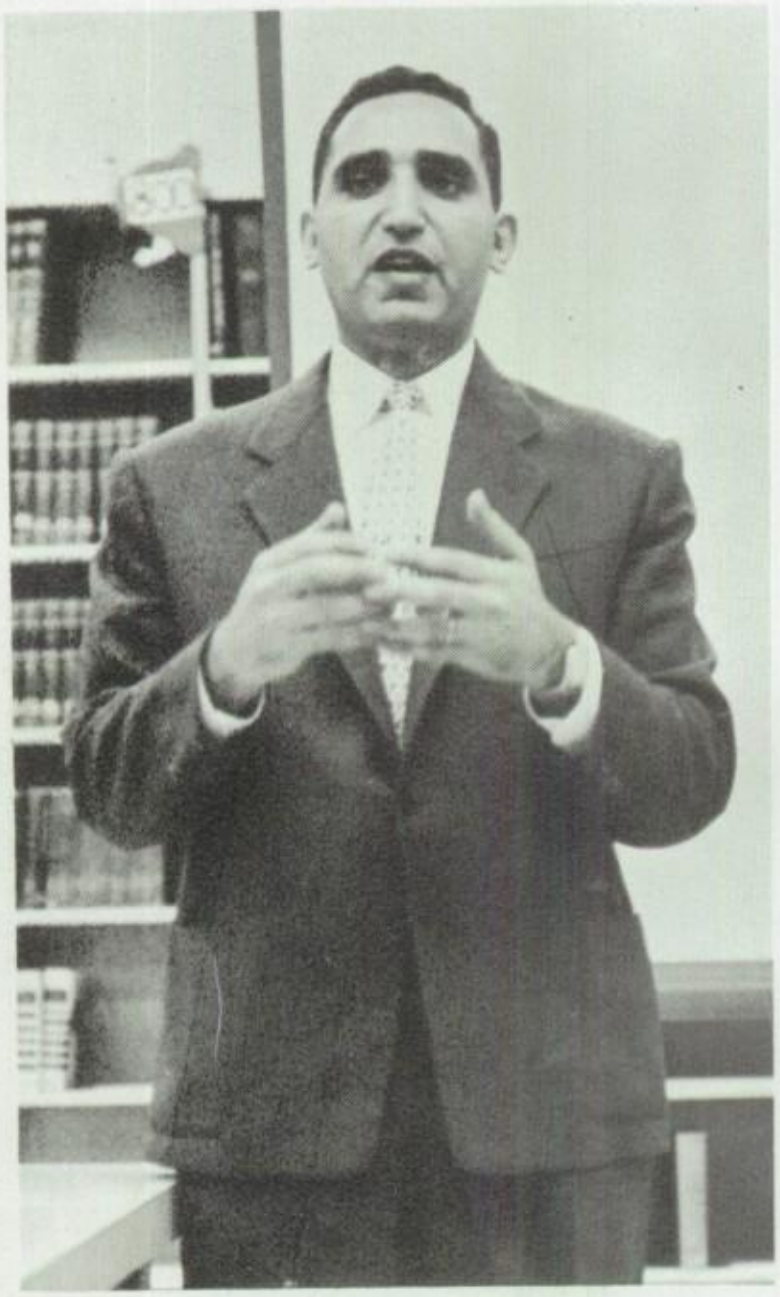
competes for top honors in National Math Test

The highlight of the year for mathematicians occurred in March when the top twelve took the National Math Test. Mr. Allred, head of the department, supervised early morning discussions on problems connected with similar triangles, logarithms, and quadratic equations that were used on previous tests. After the seven o'clock sessions, seniors dispersed to trigonometry where they found the heights of buildings, or lengths of line segments with sines, tangents, and secants. Other upperclassmen attended a review of fundamentals in a Survey of High School Math. Miss Howe's algebra class, when not laughing at antics of a student teacher, graphed linear equations, and factored algebraic functions to solve for the value of x. Confronted with new systems of teaching mathematics, sophomores traipsed up to the blackboard to demonstrate the construction of a perpendicular line in Mr. Bjarnson's Plane Geometry class and constructed three dimensional triangles.

"Adjacent over hypotenuse equals the cosine," states Paul Palmer to Sandy Case as they review basic trigonometry functions for the National Math Test.



Sophomore and junior history teacher, Mr. Schultz, emphasizes the importance of the check and balance system in our government to students in an American Political and Economic Institutions class. Later they discussed the requirements for presidential candidates.



Special guest speaker from Saudi Arabia speaks to Mr. Budge's Comparative World Cultures class on the topic of Mohammedanism.

Between sobs and tears, Carol Samuelson delivers a eulogy in memory of Mr. Rasmussen's lifeless first period and his class president, Don Williamson, during funeral services.

Granitians listen to a lecture by Mr. Dan Jones, a teacher at Bountiful High School and the University of Utah, on the United States' foreign policy. "The people of South Viet Nam will submit to the communists soon," the former Granite teacher predicted, after discussing the countries that have fallen recently.

social studies

debates US membership in United Nations

"Do you think these are all I need to cram for Rass' test?" moans Mary Lou Clark under the burden of magazines, newspapers, pamphlets and encyclopedias.

Fourteen dynamic teachers, attentive sophomore, junior, and senior students comprising the History Department, studied American and World History, Sociology, and Comparative World Cultures. Seniors, tackling a composition on "Why I Am What I Am," discovered influences in their lives they never realized were there. Dividing into group studies, listening to guest speakers, and watching films, Mr. Rasmussen's American Problems class analyzed crime, mental health, alcoholism, and narcotics. The juniors under Mr. Schultz made reports on the Battle of Stalingrad, the Nuremberg trials, and the Lindbergh kidnapping. Mr. Blackham's juniors debased: "Resolved: That the US should retain its membership in the United Nations," while his sophomores discovered secrets of the Stone, Bronze, and Ice Ages, and Mr. Pugh's class viewed a film on Mahatma Ghandi, the religious leader of India. After the assassination of President John F. Kennedy, all the classes watched real history in the making.

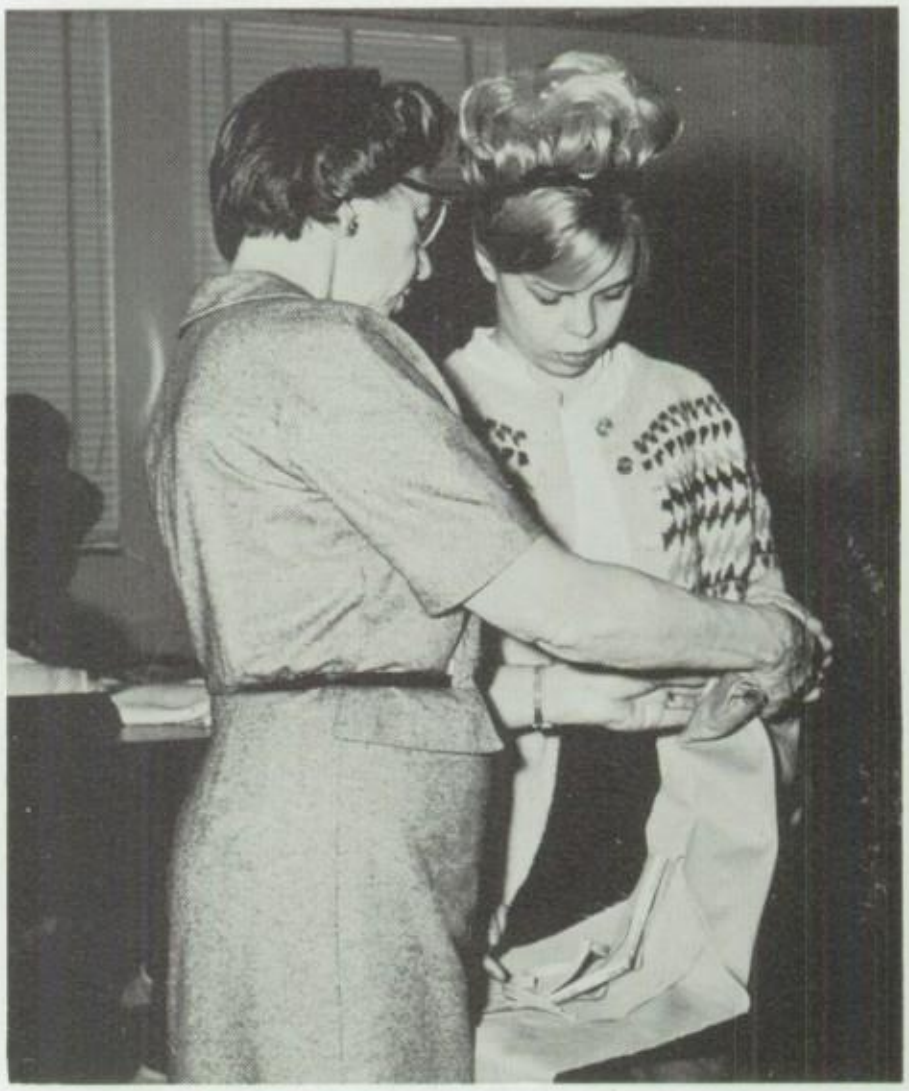
Dayle Brandvold and Cassie Gustin load towels and striped dish cloths into the Home Economics's washing machines after scrubbing labs and drying dishes.

After submitting a floor plan of their ideal home, young homemakers in Homeliving combed merchant stores throughout the city, pricing paint, sampling carpets, and tabulating the cost of drapes, furniture, and assessories needed to furnish a home. At Christmas time, the girls stitched red mouths, blue felt eyes, and pink ears on stuffed animals, hemmed cotton dresses, and smocked velveteen pillows for family presents. Other seamstresses in the sewing classes pieced patterns and fitted dresses, jumpers, and skirts to figure forms to make exact measurements and necessary adjustments and alterations. The excited misses labored faithfully through January and February on Junior Prom gowns of pale blue, pastel pink, and sunshine yellow. During this time coeds in the cooking classes analyzed nutritional values of vegetables boiled in too much water and studied the seven basic foods for a well rounded meal. By pulling taffy, kneading dough, and canning fruit, students applied information they learned from the text.

In Mrs. Olivers' Foods I and II class, Rosemary Archuletta, Rose Smith, and Carolyn Jacobsen shine bread pans to a gloss during a kitchen spring cleaning.



In fifth period beginning clothing class, Peggy Argyle eases and pins the hem of her polished cotton sheath with Mrs. Pierpont adjusting the kick pleat.

Best wishes to you in all of your endeavors. Thank you also for all of your fine work in the Grp. Sincerely, Angela Riedel Proof-reading the daily bulletin, and filing completed material are Miss Angela Riedel and Sharon Barratt, during the seventh period Office Machines class. They also prepare material for the office and the administration's varied extra-curricular activities.

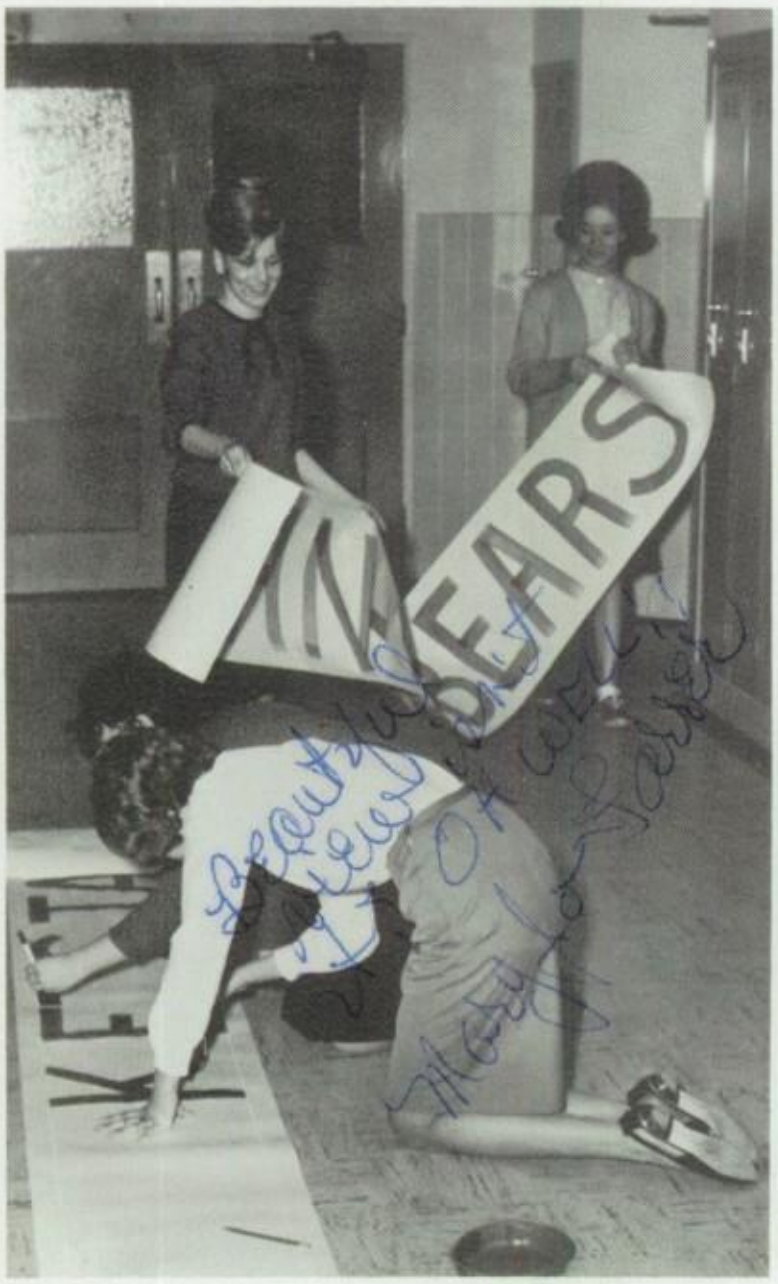
mimeographs and staples G-week booklets

To the sound of clacking typewriter keys and rustling papers, transcription students competed for Gregg Shorthand and Transcription Awards, took preliminary Civil Service and State Merit examinations in April, and gained on-the-spot experience as special in-training secretaries to Salt Lake business firms. Tangled in triplicate carbon paper and masters, second year typists sported smudged noses, and grimy fingers after erasing the final sheets for grading. Backspaced tables, number drills, dozens of form letters, and a complete job application kept advanced typists busy, while beginning "hunt-n'peckers" mastered finger exercises and memorized keyboard positions. With pencils poised and notebooks readied, shorthandists raced through brief forms to capture the 80 words per minute dictation goal. Mimeographing and stapling G-week booklets, Night of January 16th programs, teachers' bulletins, and tests, office workers slaved over the duplicator, checked in late-comers, and typed absentees.

In the birch-paneled library, Renee Stoddard translates her transcription and shorthand assignments for Mrs. Black's sixth and seventh period classes.

With mallets, swivel knives, and other tools close at hand, students in Mr. Long's fifth period leather-working class stamp intricate patterns on wallet faces. Granitians proficient in the art of leather-tooling created purses, handbags, belts, and key cases.



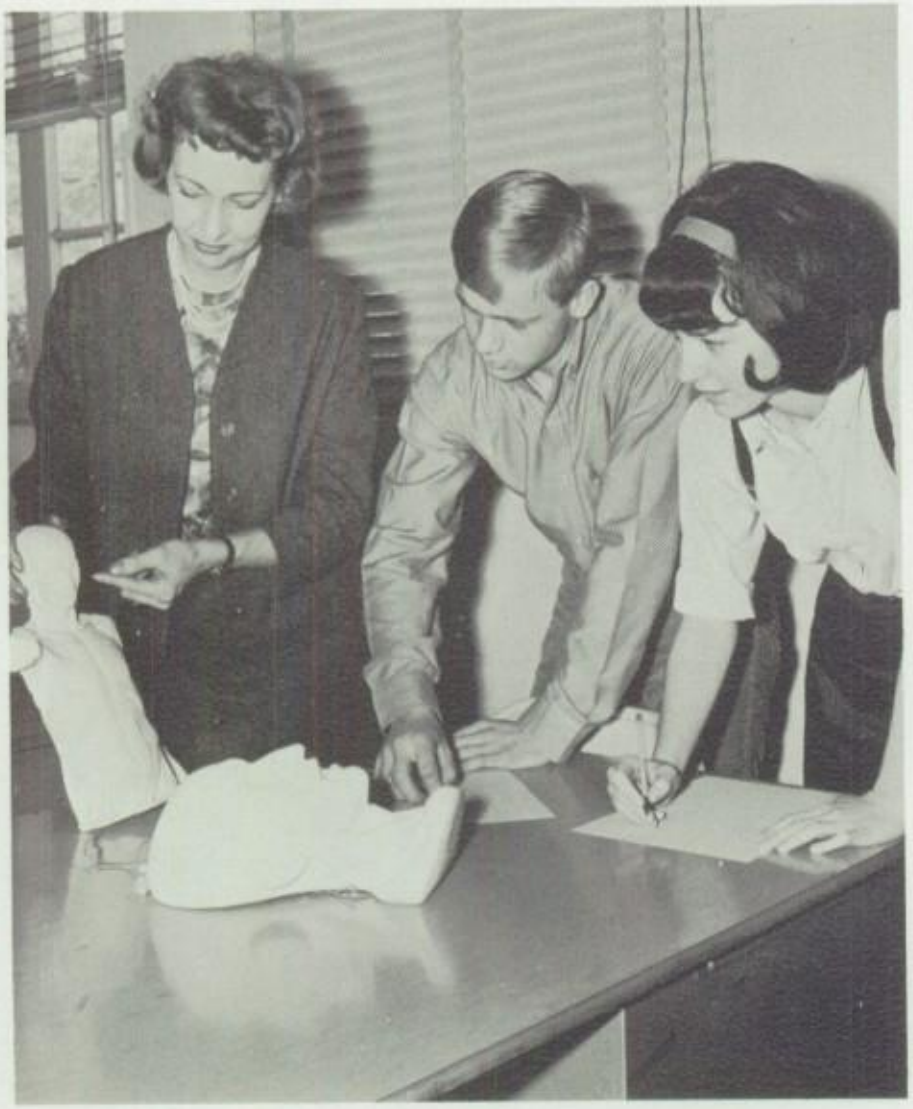
With slogans of "Bam the Bears" and "Take State," Sylvia Butterfield and Karla Balmforth hang banners to encourage school spirit.

To design fashionable rings, students in Mr. Jarvie's industrial arts class grind transparent plastic into crude shapes before filing, sanding, and buffing them to completion.

Before adding final details and color by using a process of repeated oil glazes, third period painting students — Roger Gieck, Sandy Bramble, Jana Zirker, Trudy Mitchell, Joe Granato, and Bryan Longmore — rough in light and shade values on their double portraits of Jay Davenport and Gary McKissick.

art department

completes paintings for All-State Art Show



"The highlight along the cheek brings out the form of the nose and mouth," explains Mrs. Smith to drawing students Bill Christensen and Becky Barrowes.

Busy and jovial, aspiring young artists prepared their drawings and paintings for the All-State High School Art Show, held annually in April at Granite High. Student entries flowed in from practically every high school in the state and attracted four thousand viewer critics. Mrs. Mary Jane Straight's painting students completed oil and water color compositions for the art show as they listened to the Music of Beethoven, Bach, and even the Beatles. Mrs. Virginia Smith's drawing classes finished renderings of plaster cast hands, feet, and skulls, while Mr. Edward Neslen's lettering students mastered the boldness of Gothic lettering as they again sent the proverbial "quick brown fox" scurrying past "the lazy brown dog." In the Crafts department, students, directed by Mr. Jack Jarvie, tooled leather into wallets and purses, while others, under Mr. Gene Long's supervision, shaped clay to be fired and glazed into unusual vases and figures. Jewelry classes cut, polished, and mounted stones.

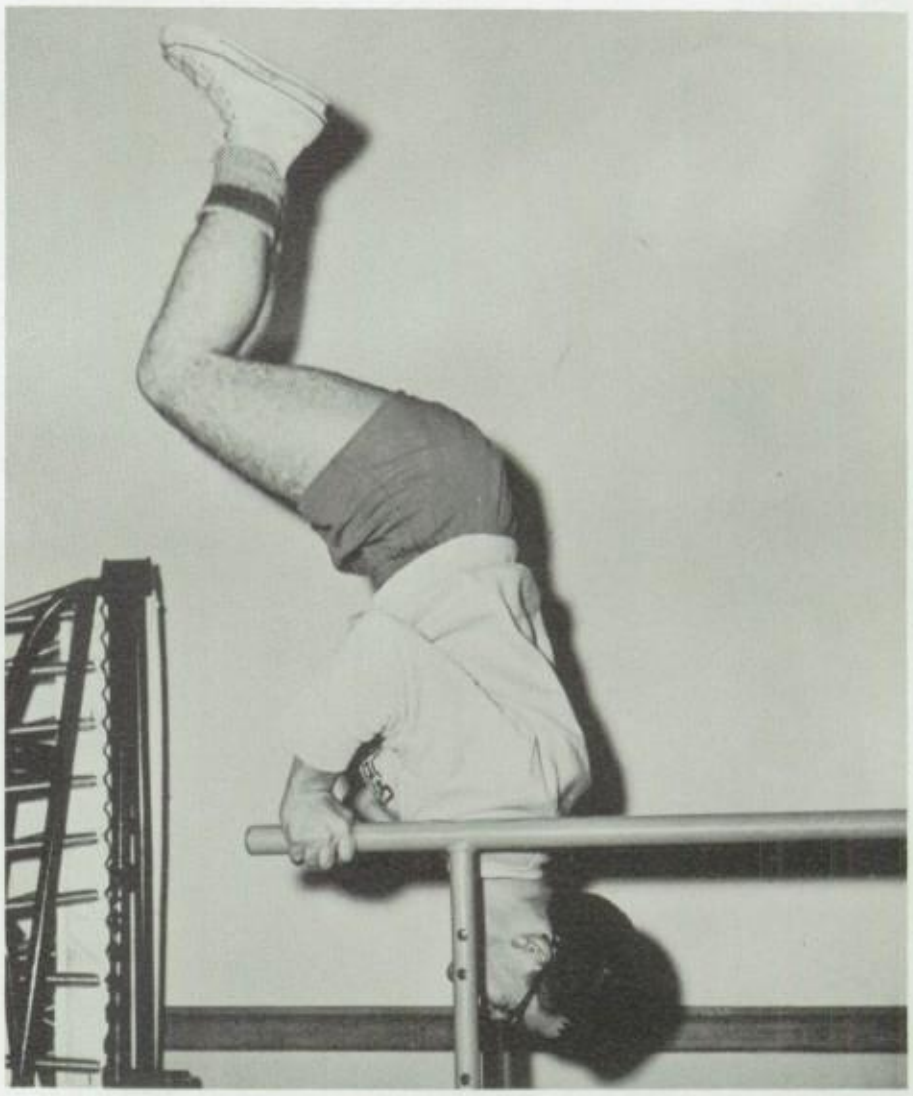
physical education

adopts new point system for accurate grading

In her fourth period swimming class, Marsha Wright practices the side stroke following Mrs. Hyatt's pointers for added speed and grace in the water.

Taught by David Peterson, a new student physical education instructor, gym students accumulated points for a new point-making system by participating in basketball, calisthenics, tumbling, trampolining, relay races, and attendance. They competed against Bruce Argyle, Dennis Griffiths, Russ Roberts, and Joe Hanga, the high point scorers. For a newly initiated seventh period Physical Education class, track enthusiasts, plagued by stormy weather until late in March, clamored to the boys' and girls' gyms to study Coach Hal Erickson's daily work out sheets, to practice push-ups and side straddle hops, and to develop coordination by bouncing on the trampoline and jumping the rope. Remaining after the 2:30 dismissal bell to sprint hurdles erected in the tunnel of the "A" building, track men confronted Granitians rushing home. Runners, broad jumpers, high jumpers, and pole vaulters scattered across the football field each March and April afternoon to become more proficient in their various fields.

Becky Barrowes and Lucille Beckstead employ strenuous pull-stretch exercise to stay trim in one of Mrs. Hyatt's sophomore girls' physical education classes.



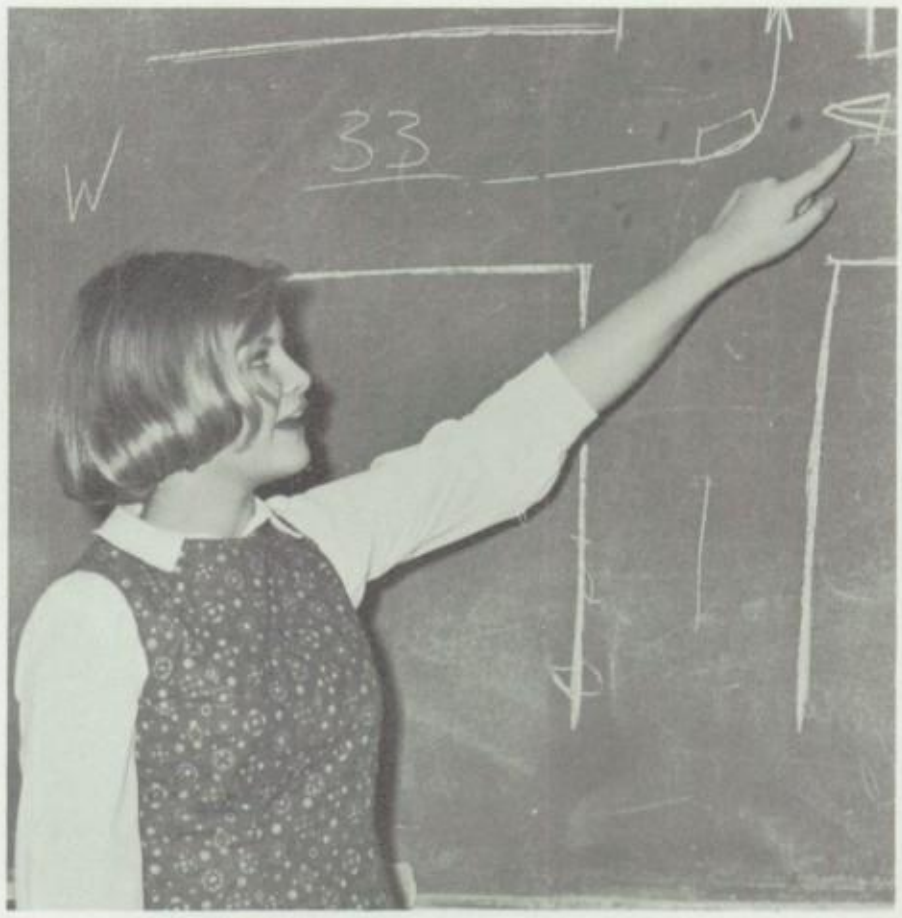
While working out in the special seventh period track class, Val Norman, a senior trackman, demonsrates strenuous muscular control on the parallel bars.

Before beginning the second phase of the Drivers' Education program of behind the wheel training, Mr. Reed uses diagrams to clarify situations that might be encountered in traffic. Safety rules and correct driving techniques are explained to the intent sophomore.

drivers' education

takes to open highway to gain road experience

To gain practical skill in good road maneuvers, sophomore Drivers' Ed students abandoned newspaper clippings, accident study, reaction time and color tests, class lectures, and reading assignments and took to the open highway, just the first step toward the sixty-five-mile-per-hour freeway. Spending approximately twenty minutes every third day behind the wheel, drivers gained some experience in shifting smoothly from low to second without hitting reverse by mistake. Faced with the ice, wind, and snow of winter, the amateurs struggled out of skids and into muddy banks, across icy roads, and over frozen bridges, through the slick, snow-packed parking lot into their safety reserved spaces behind the 'A' building. Besides mastering the basic left and right hand turns, changing lanes, and understanding road signs, students practiced changing the oil, checking the battery, filling the radiator, and tightening the spark plugs and brake linings of the new Ford Falcon, Chevrolet, and Dodge.



During the classroom portion of Driver Education training, Debbie Kilpack explains the correct method of executing a left turn on Thirty-third South.

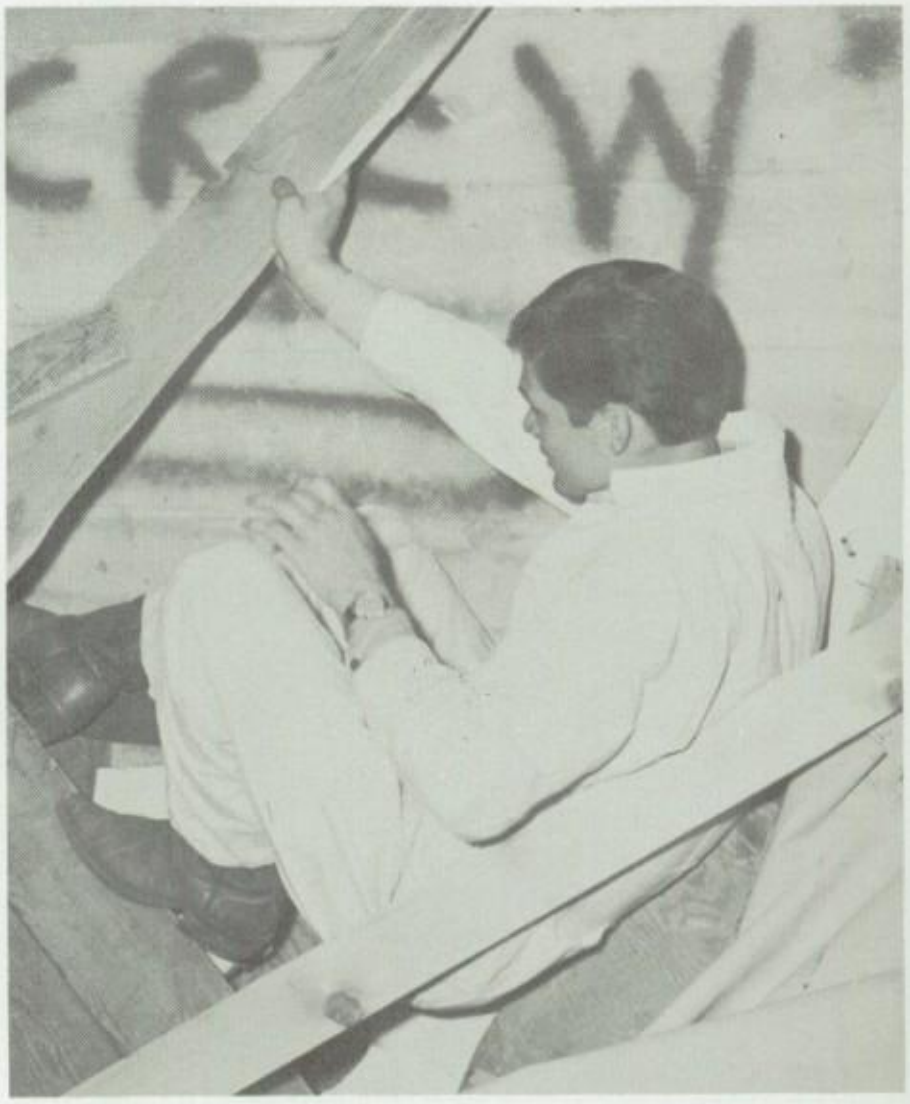
Quickly called into action for on-the-spot-productions and garbed in white coveralls, Mr. Gene McComb's eleven-man stage crew created the sound, lighting, and props for the year's assemblies. With service as their goal, the boys donated after school hours and weekends to operate auditorium facilities for the J. C.'s, special guest speakers and movies, political candidates, and PTA conferences. The junior and senior members used second period to plan careful effects of the Davis dimmers, RCA sound system, and the full-length backdrops. Adding to the excitement, stage crew members rushed into the spotlight to hold up falling trees on the Dance Assembly, pull open the curtains on the Sophomore Assembly, plug in tape recordings for the German Club Assembly, and push pianos for the Talent Assembly. Repairing, building and designing stage equipment, and setting up a communications system between stage and sound booth, the boys gained background techniques for use in civic life and profession.

Stage crew members, Jim English and Brian Nielson, arrange gray and white background trees for The Wall, a one-act play presented by the Drama Club.



In an attempt to find usable material for the Easter Cantata backdrop, Russ Childs searches through myriads of boards stored in the 'A' building tunnel.

Using a special mechanical pencil, T-square, and triangular ruler, Ronald Marshall labors over a scale drawing of an irregular oblique object. Mr. Garrison advises him to draw it with a 30° angle for three-dimensional effect during sixth period mechanical drawing.

industrial arts

constructs components for stereo cabinets

Arrayed in heavy denim aprons and safety goggles, machinists reduced iron frames to exact dimensions on the milling machine to make rifle cartridge reloading presses in the machine shop. After forming casts in sand and melting metal in a furnace, students in metal work poured the molten metal into the casts, founding book ends and name plates. Advanced electricity students worked on double projects. After assembling hi-fi and stereo components in their electricity class, they went into the woodwork class and constructed elaborate stereo cabinets. Second year auto mechanics, clad in greasy coveralls, overhauled their engines, checked electrical and fuel systems, and dug into their transmissions. In the architecture class, students first sketched the floor plan of their "dream house," then transferred their design to a dimensional drawing, and finally reproduced their drawing in blue print form with the drafting machine. To use this knowledge, several boys created dog houses and pet cages.

William Edgington and Lloyd Christensen combine skills to construct a laminated chair in their first period woodworking class.

prances down Main Street in Christmas parade

With instruments at attention, fourth-period band students listen intently for last-minute instructions in preparation for the annual Region Music Festival.

Mr. Neil Weight, dancing a little soft shoe number, announced to the band the next rehearsal selection, "The Dixieland Suite." With their trumpets, sousaphones, French horns, drums, basses, trombones, clarinets, flutes, baritones, and saxophones, the fifty-five members mounted a yellow school bus, anticipating their excursion to Highland High for the Region Three Band Festival. For judges and participants from six other high schools, they played "Totem Pole March," "Vestiges," and "Toccata for Bands," to earn a II rating. Together with the Concert Choir, Junior Choir, Girls' and Boys' Glee, and the Concert Orchestra, the band presented the Mid-Winter Concert in the auditorium at the end of February. In April the members presented "The Unsinkable Molly Brown" in the Spring Concert. To accumulate points for the new grading system, students participated in concerts, prepared instruments for inspection, attended early morning section rehearsals, and increased skills by home practice.

plays in auditorium before weekly assemblies

Senior, Hans Flink, star Dance Band soloist, presents his trumpet version of "Can't Get Started" for the Granite-Skyline Victory Dance in February.

Melodic strains of dreamy foxtrots, jaunty Dixieland jazz, racy twists, and the smooth new surf drifted through the deserted hallways of the 'S' building when the Dance Band stayed after school three or four afternoons a week to practice in the orchestra "pit." Behind the scenes at parties and rehearsals, the modern musicians jokingly called themselves "Joe Banana and his Bunch" or "Art Gum and his Rubber Band." The Granite High School Dance Band, re-organized this year by Mr. Neil Weight, the new instrumental instructor, initiated a popular new routine playing music like "Moon River", "West Side Story", "Charade", and "Music Man", played in the auditorium for the student body before weekly assemblies. The musical enthusiasts also provided the background for the Boys' League annual Mothers and Sons' Dance in January, and the Come-As-You-Are sports dance after the Granite-Skyline game. Gaining recognition, the nineteen Farmer musicians were invited to accompany Olympus' dances.

promotes school spirit at athletic contests

To generate enthusiasm at the Logan pep rally, Bayne McMillan and Gene Zeitler harmonize in low tones on the sousaphone to the snappy beat of "Victory Cry."

Dressed in traditional gold-trimmed red and blue uniforms, the Granite High School Marching Band, composed of members of the Concert Band and Cadet Band, high-stepped around the football field during the annual Homecoming parade. Participating in Band Day festivities at the Univeristy of Utah homecoming, musicians performed for at least 20,000 spectators in early October. Later, the players, with lips frozen to their trumpet, trombone, sousaphone, and French horn mouthpieces, jointed other bands from the region to prance down Main Street during the Salt Lake Christmas parade. After the Marching Band had completed its fall activities, the Pep Band, directed by Mr. Neil Weight, a new instrumental instructor, promptly took over to stimulate enthusiasm at the football and basketball games. As Granitian scores, rose, so did the roar and blasts from the Pep Band's twenty-five members, decked in red and blue vests, white shirts, dark trousers, and black striped ties.

Julene,
I'm glad that band
I could be in band
with you this year
Hope to see you next sometime. Be good and remember one thing throughout your life. ME!
Your friend

orchestra

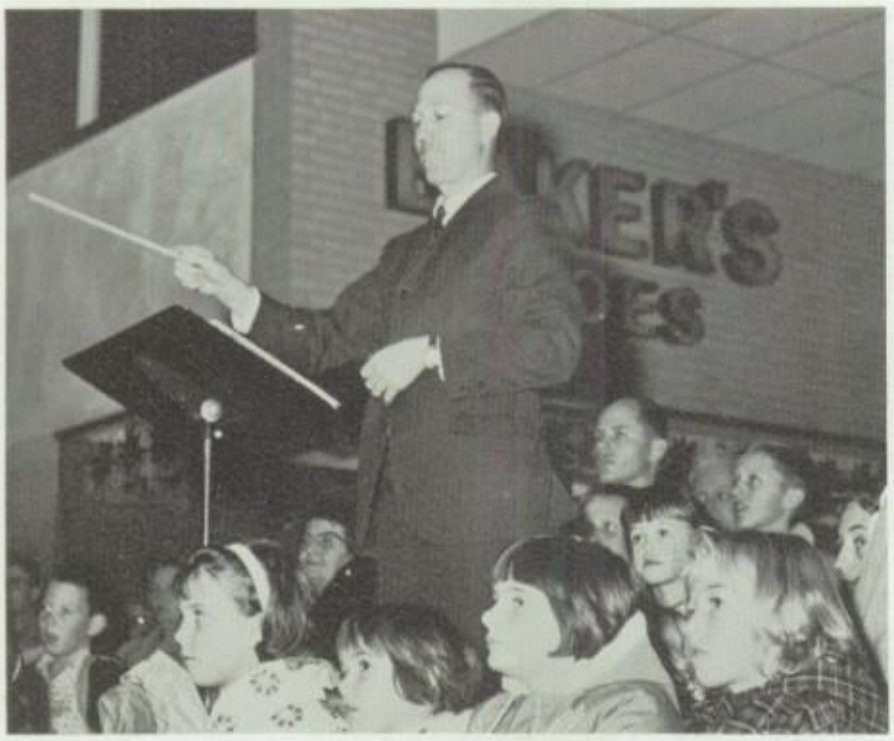
masters "Romance" for Region III music meet

To add harmonizing tones in "Romance," played on the Easter assembly, four of the orchestra's bass players stroke their rosined bows boldly across the strings.

With intense desire, improved technique, and mellow harmony, forty Concert Orchestra members topped the 1963 musical year by participating in "The Sound of Christmas", as their first official program, on December 19. Violinists, flutists, trumpeters, and drummers harmonized in "Adestes Fideles", presented "Christmas Festival", and climaxed the evening by accompanying the combined choirs and audience in the traditional favorite, "O Come All Ye Faithful." Throughout January, musicians prepared Mozart's "Magic Flute" and polished Von William's "English Folk Songs" to present at the annual February District Orchestra Festival. Solo and ensemble groups labored extra hours to gain high ratings in competition with other Region Three schools. Relaxing from the toil of endless practicing during Christmas vacation, members promoted greater morale as they frolicked on Little Mountain at a sleigh-ridng party. In black suits and dresses, they ended year with "Pomp and Circumstance" at May graduation.

concert choir

perfects music for Granite Arts program



Mr. Neal, leading concert choir in festive Christmas carols at the Cottonwood Mall, lifts baton for beginning strains of "Sleighride."

The 115 members of the Concert Choir, flocking to the newly-remodeled chorus room, searching for music folders, and scrambling up the tiers to their seats, practiced, memorized, and perfected pieces day after day. Throughout the winter, they prepared "Choose Something Like a Star," and "Libera Me" for the March music festival of the five district high school choirs. After caroling at the Veterans' and Primary Children's Hospital in December, the songsters gathered for ham sandwiches, potato salad, cherry soda, and chocolate cupcakes. Sparking Granite's Christmas spirit, the choir performed on the Christmas Assembly, the Sound of Christmas, with "Carol of the Drum," highlighted by a candlelight procession to "Adestes Fideles." Clad in red and blue robes, the choir produced the winter and spring concerts, performing the 'Bach Chorale." As May ended, and with it the high school years of the senior choir, members harmonized together for the last time at graduation exercises to "This Is My Country."

And there shall come a day . . . in spring
When death and winter
Lose their chill, white hold Quite suddenly. A day of sunlit air
When earth her gentle bosoms bare
So that new, thirsty life
May nurture there.
That breathless hour . . .
So filled with warm, soft miracles
That faith is born anew.
On such day . . .
I shall return to you!

The day will suddenly
Be filled with song,
And without stirring from your quiet place,
Your love will welcome mine . . .
Across the little space,
And we will talk of every lovely thing . . .
When I return . . . in Spring.

appreciation

In the fall of 1963, we met for the first time and discussed the ideas and brainstorms that were the infancy of the Granitian '64. From there we faced the immense struggle of combining these ideas into a smooth, rhythmic volume of the history of this year. During this struggle, we made many mistakes, but the Granitian grew day by day with patient criticism, constant effort, and playful work. We held surprise parties for birthdays of classmates, gave dinners to initiate new staff members, and decorated lockers for April Fool's day. At 6:00 A.M., morning after morning, we persuaded uncomplaining custodians to unlock S-11, and kept them outside the yearbook door until 2:30 A.M., sleepy-eyed and anxious to go home while we completed the book. We ran at least three times a day to Della's office for type paper, where we met a cool "What is it this time?" and then returned to the room evenings, tired and starving, to find that the big-hearted bookkeeper had left goodies for the kids who annoyed her continually. We met with Mr. Thorum every spare minute of his time to complain that the book would never be finished and to set dates for distribution; he returned the gesture by holding pow-wows with district officials about the construction of our darkroom and by supervising our Saturday work-sessions. We gave Gordon a ruler and demanded that he perfect layouts for the 208 pages of the book, and, on the evening before our last deadline, pleaded with Miss Madsen to let us stay until we completed the Granitian. We blazed a path to the 'I' Building to ask Mr. Richards for lost negatives, and locked photographers in the darkroom to finish prints for the final section of the book. We journeyed time and time again to the printers for counsel on layout, division pages, and cover design. We demanded that the copy writers, perhaps the most persecuted of all, remain until the wee hours to perfect picture captaions, complete copy, and compose running heads. Finally, we left the building at ten, night after night, grateful for understanding parents, who waited in concern for our arrival with hot suppers and bits of news about the day, and who, eager to hear the progress of the book, understood the importance of the 1964 Granitian to us and our loyal co-workers.

Dear Julene,

Well, hasn't this year been exciting & different? We have sure been through alot the past 4 or 5 years, haven't we. Like toilet papering, car wrecking, + just having plain ol fun. You have got to learn how to golf this summer. Between burning + pestering teachers it has been a very different & difficult year. (But fun)

We will have to go buzzin around

How was your summer? I'm sure it was fun. I wish I could do something for sometime. If I'm ever in Tennessee & your way I just thinking of course). Well, always see the way you are, you have a sparkling personality.

Love, Suzie
